Inside

Francis Whitaker, one of the many strong-willed characters who dot the history of Carmel, returned from Aspen, Colo., last week to visit with old friends. A blacksmith by trade, Whitaker also served for 11 years on the Carmel City Council. The reunion for Whitaker was hosted at the Forge in the Forest, today a bar but several years ago his metals workshop. A free-wheeling interview with Whitaker appears starting on page 17 in Section Two.

CITY AUDIT FINDS FLAWS

Auditors spotted several flaws in the way City Hall handles its business. Haskins and Sells, the Salinas accounting firm, found a pervasive casual attitude in the financial dealings it examined for the fiscal year 1976-77. On Monday, the new city administrator, Jack Collins won council approval to hire an additional finance officer. Details about the audit and its repercussions appear on page two.

BALZER DRINKS WHISKEY

A whiskey from Japan? Yes, says wine critic Robert Lawrence Balzer, and it is of superb quality. He explains the success of the "signature" label by Suntory on page seven.

THANKSGIVING ...GOING ON CHRISTMAS

It may be Thanksgiving, but it is Christmas, too. Just witness the Yuletide gift bazaars hosted in Carmel over the weekend. Photos from the three events appear on pages eight and nine.

'Who me?'

"WHO, ME?" this turkey seems to be asking. Tom Zobel out in Carmel Valley raises them as a hobby. He and the family are having their Thanksgiving dinner with some relatives in Salinas. Guess who is bringing the turkey? (George T. C. Smith photo)

'Even a turkey can raise one,' says hobbyist turkey tender

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THIS GUY talks turkey.

"Turkeys are simple to raise. Even a turkey can raise a turkey," says Tom Zobel, 27, a hobbyist turkey tender from Carmel Valley.

Before you gobble up the gobbler tonight, Zobel suggests a better idea for next year's holiday — raise your own. That is, if you have the space.

"They taste better and they're cheaper," he says. Zobel raises turkeys out back of his supply store, Hacienda Hay and Feed on Carmel Valley Road. He's been doing it for five years.

Zobel makes raising turkeys sound simpler than raising goose bumps. All they require is some food (corn feed), water and a clean pen.

Turkeys usually will remain disease-free as long as they are kept away from chickens, he adds. Chickens can cause a disease in turkeys called "blackheads." It eats away at the liver.

If you are serious about raising a bird for Thanksgiving, Zobel says you will want to buy a poult (young turkey) somewhere between one day and one week old.

Usually you can pick them up at a feed store. That is where his profits come in, Zobel explains. He loses money off the poults and chicks he sells, but pulls it back in from the feed he sells.

BUY A YOUNG turkey around June and it will be ready for stuffing and cranberry sauce come Thanksgiving, he reckons.

A good, plump turkey will scarf up about 100 pounds of feed before it's ready for the platter, according to the turkey expert. That amount of feed costs about $12. A poult can be purchased for about $2.

But turkeys do present one problem. They are dumb.

Zobel walks back to his turkey pen behind the store and shows why. "Look at that one," he says, pointing to a white-feathered turkey. "He's picking scraps from the ground, but he has a bowl full of cornmeal over there."

IF YOU think that is dumb, Zobel can list a couple real winners for you.

There was the turkey he owned who went to drink some water, forgot to lift its head up and drowned.

Then there was the turkey who kept forgetting how to eat and drink. He would have starved, but

Council ok's $140,000 ...

THE CARMEL City Council tentatively agreed to add $140,000 to the city budget at a work session Monday.

A resolution to appropriate the money, which would include funds to hire an assistant city finance director, will be considered at the Dec. 5 City Council meeting.

All funds for the budget adjustment will come from the city's general fund and hostelry tax revenues.

Expenditures to be approved by City Council Dec. 5, as discussed at Monday night's "mini-budget" session, include:

- Hiring an assistant director to the city finance department ($11,711).
- Improvements to the filing system at City Hall ($8,000).
- Adoption of a medical insurance plan for the city councilmen ($3,423).
- An increase to the city's general liability insurance ($1,898).
- An increase to the city's building contents property damage insurance ($16,000).
- Allocation of funds to hire a consultant to help rewrite the city's General Plan ($7,000).
- Allocation of funds for a Secret Witness program to help deter crime on the Peninsula ($500).
- Alteration of public restrooms at the beach to conserve water through a proposed air-pressure flushing system ($3,000).
- Addition of 150 chairs to Sunset Center's room 20 ($11,250).
- Construction of a footbridge to resolve a safety hazard at Flanders-Doolittle Park ($18,000).

City Administrator Jack Collins pushed hard for funds to secure a third employee in the Finance Department.

Collins expressed his displeasure with the city financial record keeping.

BUDGETING for the new position will fulfill a request made by the Haskins and Sells accounting firm at the Nov. 14 City Council meeting. The appropriation passed 4-0 with Councilwoman Helen Arnold absent for the vote.

"I see no way of solving our problems other than hiring another employee," Collins told the councilmen.

The city administrator added that he had not yet "coordinated" in his mind how the three persons in the department would share duties.

The department currently employs a finance officer at $22,824 a year and an accounting clerk at $12,557.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg, known to resist added city hiring, joined the other lawmakers in approving the new finance post.

"This is an extraordinary thing for me to be voting to add help, but in the end we are saving money," the mayor said.

The lawmakers also approved $7,000 in funding for a consultant to assist the city planning department with the local coastal work program and in rewriting the General Plan.

"The entire General Plan needs to be redone. It does not meet today's standards," Collins said.

The General Plan, a written guideline for the city's future growth, has not been rewritten since 1973, even though the city code calls for an annual review of the plan.

"It is out of date. You cannot read a page without finding something wrong," Councilman Mike Brown claimed.

THE COUNCILMEN also donated up to $500 to the Secret Witness Program sponsored by the Monterey Kiwanis Club and conducted with the cooperation of the Monterey Peninsula Herald.

The program offers cash rewards for tips about crimes on the Peninsula.

"It strikes me as a sad commentary on our society that this item is on our agenda," commented Brown, who reluctantly voted for the funding.

THE LAWMAKERS next budgeted $3,000 for an alternative restroom at the beach. The portable toilets could soon be replaced by a system that flushes using air pressure. It would save both money and water, according to Collins.

No funds for Highway 1 road work

Assemblyman Henry J. Mello (D-Watsonville) will refrain from seeking funds for Highway 1 improvements until Carmel decides what it wants, Mello's assistant said Monday.

"The ball is back in the city's court," said aide Kevin La Graff.

Mello was denied the $2.7 million in Highway 1 improvement funds he sought in late October from the State Highway Commission.

The commission turned down each of the three highway projects in Monterey County proposed by Mello.

Projects requested by Mello could have cost more than $30 million. The California Transportation six-year program budget is $6.4 billion.

The commission, however, did grant $9.5 million for maintenance to Monterey County highways, La Graff said.

Mello said he was disappointed no new construction projects were earmarked for Monterey County.

The Highway Commission's six-year program will be updated next year, La Graff noted, but Mello will wait for comments from Carmel citizens before requesting more funds.

Mello met with Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg early this month following a flurry of letters Mello received condemning the improvements he suggested for Highway 1 between Carmel Hill and the Carmel River.

Some constituents suggested reviving the Caltrans proposal for a freeway to parallel Highway 1 behind Carmel High School. Norberg strongly opposes such a project.

The Carmel City Council will consider a resolution that could eliminate the possibility of all freeways south of the Pacific Grove-Pebble Beach interchange at its Jan. 3 meeting.

Sewage disposal

Dear Editor:

Should San Joaquin Valley agricultural wastewater be emptied into Monterey Bay? The California Regional Water Quality Control Board is seeking a way to dispose of huge amounts of water contaminated with nitrates and pesticides, a growing problem threatening agriculture production.

At its Nov. 18 meeting in Seaside, four possible methods were discussed. No. 1 — piping the water to the Pacific just above Morro Bay; No. 2 — piping the water to Monterey Bay; No. 3 — transporting the water to the lower delta of the Sacramento River; No. 4 — using the water for cooling nuclear power plants by evaporation.

No. 4 was dropped when I pointed out that evaporation of part of the water and then returning the higher salinity remainder to the aquifer would not alleviate the problem. On No. 1 and No. 2, the project director agreed with my position that having to pump the water over the 2,000-foot Cottonwood Pass to get it to Morro Bay, rather than over the 1,400-foot Pacheco Pass would make Monterey Bay a more likely target than Morro Bay. Our best hope at the moment is that the water will be dumped into the Sacramento River.

Political opposition to Alternatives 1, 2 and 3 would be about equal, possibly greater in the Sacramento River area because it would have more clout in the state capitol, adding to Monterey Bay's chances of winning first place, if and when this issue actually comes right down to the wire.

However, disposal in Monterey Bay may not be that bad, especially if we wind up with not much choice, anyway. I proposed to the Control Board that it might be possible for them to make a deal with citizens served by the Monterey Sanitary District by offering to share the cost of our new state-mandated sewer project in return for sharing our outfall line. Individual local opinions on that idea would generally boil down to how concern for the environment would compare with concern for the pocketbook, concerns that could vary considerably in intensity, depending on whether they were out in the open under observation or behind a curtain in a voting booth, suffering from acute pocketbook angina brought on by inflation, high taxes and fantastic sewer charges.

To offset political opposition from citizens served by the Carmel Sanitary District, the beleaguered valley farmers might also be willing to share the cost of rerouting Carmel's sewage effluent from Carmel Bay.

In the meantime, San Francisco Bay area cities still want to unload their sewage effluent either into the Pacific at Half Moon Bay, or into the Salinas or San Joaquin Valleys for irrigation use, with Half Moon Bay most likely to win.

Cruelty of traps

Dear Editor:

The fur trapping season currently is underway and there is a lot of unseen cruelty taking place in its connection. The steel traps which the trappers use to trap and then kill the furbearers are cruel by their very nature. Any unpadded steel edge snapping shut on a small limb with enough force to hold the animal in its jaws despite every ounce of effort on the part of the animal to gain freedom has to be cruel in the infliction of pain and studies clearly indicate this.

We need to outlaw these traps and the fur trapping season altogether. Killing these wild animals for fashion whims is a horrible blemish on the human species. Slaying them for sporthunting pleasures is bad certainly, but the gun doesn't approach the slow killing or maiming the trap is responsible for.

Wildlife research for the most part indicates that fur trapping serves no real purpose in wildlife management and can be detrimental to a species. The trappers will use many rationalizations to try to justify their ugly deeds but the fact remains that fur trapping is cruel, unnecessary and ecologically unwise.

Bury the dissension

Dear Editor:

Just a few lines to express my full agreement with the thought expressed by Rosemary Linn (Letters, Nov. 10).

The Pine Cone just lacks the distinction it used to have. May I urge you to return to the prior format. It's not much fun to read when the first thing you see and read is the dissension of the Carmel officials. Perhaps you could hide it on page two.

after damaging audit is filed

AN AUDIT OF Carmel city finances through June has turned up bookkeeping gaffes, unreconciled bank statements and a lack of thoroughness in business transactions.

No wrongdoing was implied by the auditors, but they have urged the Carmel City Council to hire an additional employee to improve controls on finance procedures.

The audit covered the fiscal year 1967-77. It was conducted by Haskins and Sells, the Salinas accounting firm. The firm completed the audit Aug. 26 and returned an eight-page letter that urges several changes in the city finance department. The letter was given to the council last week although it was dated Sept. 6.

City Administrator Jack Collins said he would follow the suggestions if the City Council authorizes hiring an additional finance officer to carry out the changes. Councilman David Hughes, a businessman, led the move that resulted in the audit.

Collins became the city administrator in July and had promised to revamp the methods of budgeting in Carmel.

Findings from the audit, he said, confirmed his personal appraisal of the finance system here.

Despite a city law requiring them, yearly inventories of city-owned property have not been taken, the letter said. Common accounting procedures require fixed assets like inventories to be reported in a budget, it said.

Speaking to the council, Richard Waldren, a partner in the accounting firm, said the best way to keep track of city property is to "go out and count it."

HASKINS AND SELLS also reported that as of June 30, 15 items totaling $4,815 had not been reconciled with bank statements. The auditors said the items had accumulated over a two-year period.

"Preparation of bank reconciliations should be done on a timely basis. We understand that the new treasurer is preparing such reconciliations promptly," the firm stated in its report.

The budget of the Harrison Memorial Library, which received $266,000 in city aid last year, has not been audited for several years, the report also said. No regular reports are given to the city about library finances, even in unaudited form, Haskins and Sells said.

The firm said Eleanor Melvin, president of the library board of trustees, signed a letter Sept. 8 which states that the trustees assume responsibility for the library's financial operations.

"While this letter of understanding between the library and the city improves the situation, the status of the library still is not completely clear," the report said. It urges that the financial duties and responsibilities of the two agencies be more clearly drawn.

TICKET SALES for the attractions at Sunset Center require changes too, the auditors said. The city finance department, it said, should be given a copy of the center's reconciliation of used and unsold tickets. The copy is needed to verify that amounts deposited by Sunset Center officials are correct.

Refunds on tickets should be made with city checks, not those now drawn against the Sunset Center account, it said. Moreover, the report stated, "Cash on hand at Sunset Center should be limited to an imprest petty cash fund for minor disbursements."

Security at the community center ticket booth also should be reviewed by Carmel officials because cash often is collected at evening events, the audit letter said.

AFTER EXAMINING spending procedures, Haskins and Sells recommended that the city establish a limit on the amount which could be spent without receiving competitive bids. No dollar amount was suggested.

A finance department employee should be designated to handle city purchasing, the report said. Later, it urged the city administration to hire an additional employee in the department. It presently has two full-time employees.

In a final recommendation, the accounting firm asked city officials to eliminate several accounts within the budget. It said they serve "no useful purpose." Previous appropriations by the Carmel City Council created the special funds, but Haskins and Sells said it saw no reason why the accounts could not be merged with the general fund.

Waldren, the accounting firm representative, strongly urged the councilmen to add another finance worker. "At the present time, " he said, "there is no time for the people in that office to go out and do these things."

Robbers hit Post Office

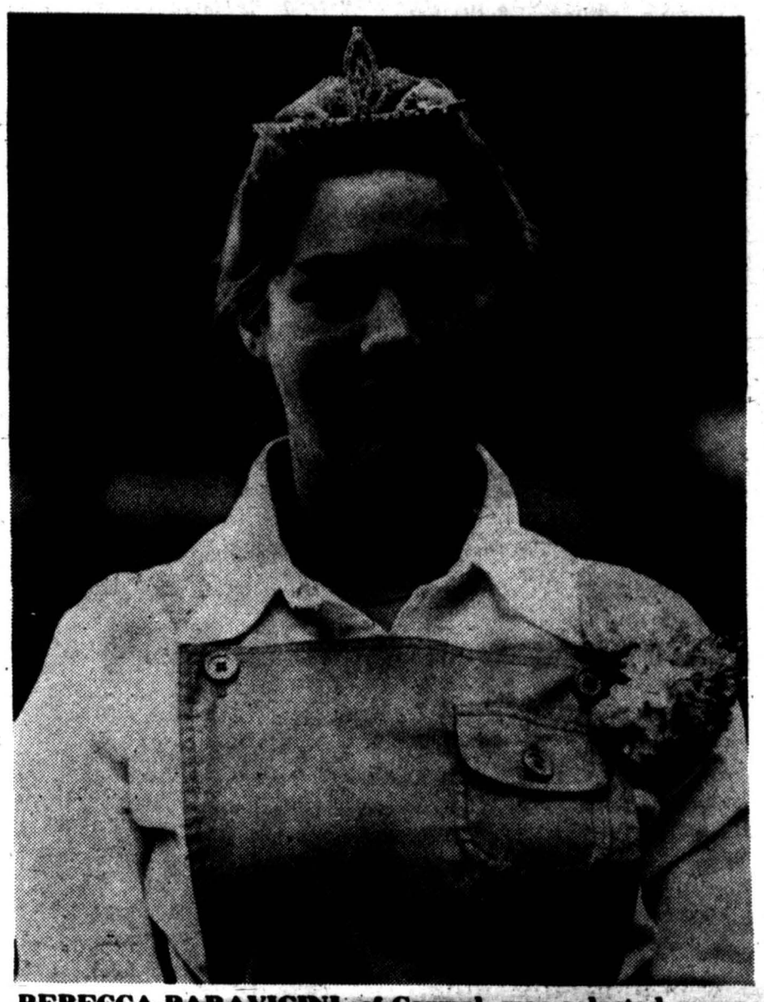
Thieves strong-armed a change machine at the Carmel Post Office Monday and fled with $200 in bills.

Police said the padlock on the machine, situated in the office lobby, had been broken and that the front part of the machine had been removed and dumped in a nearby trash can.

The robbery is believed to have happened sometime between 5:30 and 7 a.m., they said.

The lobby was opened at 4:40 a.m. by a postal employee, Roy H. Chappell, 25, of Carmel, according to records on the case. A post office janitor, Robert C. Johnson, 33, told officers he dumped the trash cans in the lobby at 5:30 a.m. and found no parts of the machine.



REBECCA PARAVICINI, of Carmel, was selected queen of "Spirit Week" at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach. A sophomore, she is an honor student and a member of the girls' tennis team. The annual November event on campus coincided with the football game against Hollister High School earlier this month. (Bob Bassett photo)

One-fifth of river cleared of debris

Riverbed clearance along the Carmel River is roughly 20 per cent completed, the engineer in charge of the project said Friday.

Debris is being removed from the parched river as a precaution against flooding this winter. Carl Clayton, of Clayton and Associates Civil Engineers in Salinas, said work along the lower stretch of the creek is 25 per cent complete.

In the upper region of Carmel Valley, he said, work was 20 per cent finished. Clayton said only 10 per cent of the clearance along the Mid-Valley stretch of the river has been completed.

Clayton is under contract by the County Flood Control District for the project. He said he hoped to complete river clearance before Jan. 1.

In answer to inquiries, both Clayton and a flood district spokesman denied that work crews intend to burn fallen trees in the riverbed that could be used for firewood.

"We plan to burn the brush, but the actual firewood, the pieces that can be used for firewood, we will cut that and throw it on the property of the owner," said Joe Madruga, of the flood control district.

"Any wood that is any good, we cut and stack for the property owners," said Clayton. "Most of the wood we find, however, is not of good quality. It is dried out and rotten."

Clayton said four 10-man work crews are involved in the riverbed clearance. He said they will burn unusable debris. Clayton said he was in the process of obtaining burning permits. "We will not burn until there is rain or some shower activity though," he said.

Leashed dog topples master

Out on a midmorning walk with his dog, an elderly Carmel man suffered cuts on his legs and head when the pet spied a squirrel and dashed after it. The dog jerked on its leash, pulling Bert Rowland to the ground.

The mishap occurred on Thursday, Nov. 17, at 11:24 a.m. Rowland was walking west on Second Street.

Police identified Rowland as a man in his 70s.

Collins tells seniors about city workings

CARMEL City Administrator Jack Collins is just beginning to collect his dividends.

Collins made the investment four months ago when he left a secure job in Ontario, Ore., and came here with hopes of improving City Hall's workings.

At an informal speech last week to the Carmel Foundation, Collins described Carmel's new form of government since his arrival here in August. He compared it to a corporation, complete with executives, investors and even red tape.

"The stockholders are the voters, the board of directors is the City Council and the business manager is me, the city administrator," he told the group.

But a business manager just isn't supposed to act like Collins. For one thing, he smiles a lot, and spotting him in a necktie is less likely than rain tomorrow.

Yet it was all business during the give-and-take session. Collins explained Carmel's new council-manager type of government to an audience of 50 senior citizens and fielded some angry questions about bicycles, skateboards and runaway dogs. But Collins had the wheels of his own speech to pedal.

"I'VE HAD absolutely incredible cooperation from the department heads and from the City Council," Collins said.

As city administrator, Collins explained, he is responsible for the day-to-day operation and administration of city government.

In other words, the City Council assigns him a chore and he does it. What's more, he keeps tabs on all department heads and has the power to fire them.

In a department-by-department account, Collins described to a sometimes surprised audience the varied city services Carmel provides.

He noted these services are available only within the city's square mile. Carmel employs 75 full-time city workers and the departments operate on a combined $2.7 million budget, Collins noted.

Public Works

Public works digs into more of the city budget than any department except the police, some $450,000 worth, Collins said. "The most visible operation in the city," Collins explained, employs 12 persons. "They are responsible for maintaining 30 miles of streets within the city's square mile," Collins said.

The Department of Public Works also is responsible for beach maintenance, storm drainage, litter, planters and park upkeep, remarked Collins.

Forestry Department

Carmel's Forestry Department has nine full-time employees. The entire county of Monterey employs only seven full-time foresters for an area of 33,000 square miles, according to the city administrator.

"There is an incredible commitment to the maintenance of trees in this city," he said.

The city policy has it, for every one tree removed, five trees are planted, Collins said. Carmel never was a naturally wooded area. He explained a history of careful planting in the city accounts for most of Carmel's trees.

The department is primarily responsible for tree planting, trimming and maintenance of 16,000 city trees, Collins said.

Fire Department

Why a $250,000 budget for a fire department in a town this small?

"Perhaps that is necessary in a city so full of trees," Collins suggested.

The Fire Department employs five paid members, and 30 volunteers paid $2 to $3 to serve during a fire, he said.

The department's main objective is not to fight fires, Collins noted, but to prevent them from starting.

The relatively new fire equipment includes four engines, purchased since 1963, and one ambulance owned by the Red Cross but maintained by city personnel.

"All fire or ambulance services are provided without charge to the user," Collins pointed out.

He said the department "over-responds" to most fires. But he added, "It is better to have too many people than too few."

Police Department

Carmel's Police Department does not spend much time catching criminals, the city administrator admitted.

"Crime prevention," he said, "is the name of the game in Carmel."

The department operates on $590,000 and employs a staff of 26, including 17 sworn officers.

The parking and traffic enforcement division generates in excess of $100,000 for the city.

Roughly one-third of the department's officers have graduated from the prestigious FBI Academy, in Washington, D.C.

"I'd wager that is the highest average in the country," Collins said.

Other Departments

The Finance Department employs two full-time persons who "pay the city's bills," Collins said. He said the department needs another member for "inventory control and purchasing."

The city's Building Department operates under two full-time building inspectors. "They protect dwelling owners against shoddy builders," Collins said.

The Planning Department, Collins noted, is about to get involved in "forward planning." A consultant in urban economics and planning, Gregory L. Cory, has been hired to assist in writing the city's new General Plan. Cory, from San Francisco, will receive up to $2,000 for his consultation.

The Sunset Community and Cultural Center has four employees. Collins said a complete fire sprinkling system should be installed in the 733-seat auditorium.

Bike ride scheduled in Corral de Tierra

A bike ride in the beautiful Corral de Tierra canyon and a hike to Carmel River Camp are on the outing calendar of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club. Members of other chapters and interested nonmembers are welcome to join Sierra Club excursions.

Riders will meet at 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 26, at the intersection of Highway 68 and Corral de Tierra Rd. The 14-mile ride is half uphill, but not considered strenuous. For more information, phone leaders Chet and Bev Gadaire, 375-8995.

A moderate-to-strenuous hike from the Los Padres Dam parking lot to where Miller Creek joins the Carmel River is also planned for Saturday, Nov. 26. Hikers will meet at Brinton's in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel, at 8:30 a.m. The 10-mile round trip involves a 400-foot elevation gain. For more information, phone 372-5480.

Lone parents announce party Friday in Carmel

The Monterey Peninsula Chapter of Parents Without Partners plans a TGIF party Friday, Nov. 25, at La Playa Hotel, Eighth and Camino Real, Carmel. The no-host, end-of-the-week celebration begins at 5 p.m.

Also planned is a family bowling party, Sunday, Nov. 27, 2 p.m., at Monterey Lanes, 2161 Fremont, Monterey. The chapter will pay for bowling for members' children. For more information, phone Chuck Ballard, 649-4732.

A wine and fondue party is planned Sunday, Nov. 27, 4:30 p.m., at the home of Annabeth Phelps, 28 Ralston Drive, Monterey. Bring your own wine; Annabeth will provide three different fondues. For more information, phone 375-1265.

Parents Without Partners is a nonsectarian organization devoted to the interests and welfare of all single parents. Annual dues are $14; guest privileges are granted for a two-month period.

For more information, phone 373-2795.

Free U sets crafts fair

An arts and crafts fair sponsored by University for Man, Monterey's free university, is scheduled Friday-Sunday, Nov. 25-27, at the Custom House Plaza near Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey. Hours are 10 a.m.-6 p.m. each day.

More than 75 craftsmen are expected to display their wares, including many items suitable for Christmas gifts.

For more information, phone 373-5522.

Carmel woman lectures on violence

Barbara Greenberg, of Carmel, will be the featured speaker at the November meeting of the National Organization for Women scheduled Monday at 7:30 in the Monterey Public Library meeting room, Madison and Pacific.

The topic for the evening will be battered women. Barbara Greenberg is a member of Women against Domestic Violence and has conducted several local training sessions on the subject.

Final performances of 'Company'

Final performances of the Steven Sondheim musical about contemporary marriage, Company, will be staged Thursday-Sunday, Nov. 24-27, at the Carmel Barnyard Theatre in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., Carmel. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Thursday-Saturday evenings and 7:30 p.m. Sundays.

The cast of the sophisticated comedy includes Bob Lester, LaVonne Rae Andrews, Gloria Elber, Joe Patrick, Ken Crockett, Wendy Goldman, Tina Paradiso, C. J. McArthur, Jeannie M. Hughes, Roberta Sengstack, Bruce Tuthill, Tom R. Sanchez, Harrison Shields, JoLinda Sorci and Annie Holt Atherton.

Fred Weiss is drector and choreographer of the production.

After Friday and Saturday evening performances, the Barnyard Theatre presents Come to the Cabaret, a variety show of performances by local singers, dancers and musicians. Bruce Tuthill is the singing host and Renee Tuthill provides piano accompaniment.

Tuthill, who is currently starring in Company and played Curly in Oklahoma! sings everything from Barry Manilow favorites to grand opera arias.

For reservations or more information, phone 625-1228.

Library to close early on Friday

Harrison Memorial Library will close early on Friday, the day after Thanksgiving.

The library will open at 10 a.m., the regular opening time, but it will close at 6 p.m., a library spokesman said. The library normally stays open Friday until 9 p.m.

Ah, turkeys

Zobel hand-fed him.

Turkeys are a friendly lot. When another animal happens by the pen, more often than not, a turkey will stick its head out to make friends. "More turkeys get their heads bit off that way," Zobel laments, shaking his own.

He even has seen turkeys die of fright.

"Brown turkeys are smarter than white ones," insists the fowl expert. "They're also friendlier."

They make darned good pets. He says that's because they are so dumb. "They're good watchdogs, too. When a stranger comes, they gobble and gobble."

THE ZOBEL family would rather have a pet turkey than a dog. "We used to have a few pet turkeys but they got too expensive. We gradually had to eat them," he admits.

Turkeys get along with most animals. But man isn't the only animal who savors turkey meat. Bobcats and raccoons prey on our feathered friends, Zobel notes.

Along with his wife, Leslie, Zobel once raised a 44-pound turkey. He says they don't get much bigger than that.

STORE-BOUGHT turkeys are out as far as Zobel is concerned. "Turkey farms shoot them full of hormones to make them grow faster," he says.

People prefer toms (males) to hens (females) because they are plumper, remarks Zobel.

Can turkeys sense when it's getting near Thanksgiving?

"Naw," answers Zobel, "they're too stupid."

The Zobel family, including children Marion, 2, and Clinton, three months, will celebrate Thanksgiving tonight with Zobel's relatives in Salinas.

Guess who's bringing the turkey?

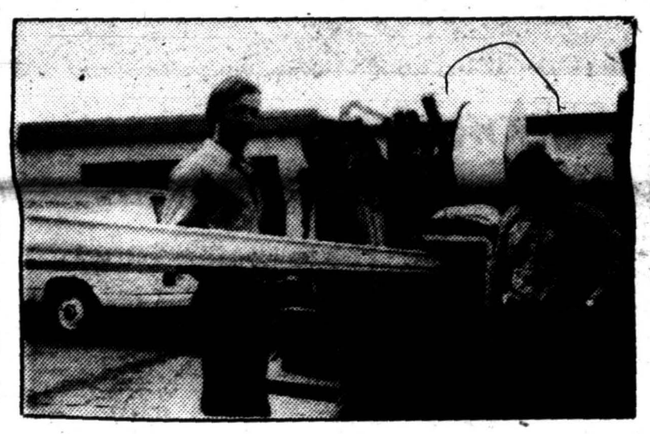
STOP
YOUR RAIN GUTTER RUST-OUT PROBLEMS



HUDELSON & MYERS PRESENT THEIR RAIN GUTTER
"FACTORY ON WHEELS"

Pictured here is our remarkable new machine making continuous rain gutters on a job in Pebble Beach. It's the only machine of its kind on the entire Monterey Peninsula.

This amazing equipment can roll out seamless strips of gutter any length up to 980 feet! No seams mean better appearance, better draining, easier cleaning, no joint leakage.

What's more, the material is long-lasting aluminum which will not rust, with a fine protective coating of bonderized paint (like an enamel, applied under high pressure) both inside and out.

Expensive? Not at all! The cost for this extraordinary rain gutter is comparable to ordinary types of galvanized metal gutters which rust out in very few years.

So give us a call. Our skilled craftsmen will quickly and expertly produce and install this great new gutter right on the job for you. Remember . . . it's aluminum and will not rust.

Public Notice

ORDINANCE NO. 77-30
AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING PENALTIES FOR LATE PAYMENT FOR BUSINESS LICENSE TAXES AND DEPOSITS

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Part III, Division 2, Section 302.9c of the Municipal Code of Carmel-by-the-Sea is amended to read in its entirety as follows:

302.9c PENALTIES FOR DELINQUENT PAYMENT. License tax must be paid for all times during which a business is carried on within the City even for periods when the business has been carried on illegally due to lack of a valid license.

If the tax is not paid within thirty (30) days after it is due, a penalty of TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT (25 per cent) of the tax due shall be added and an additional penalty of FIVE PER CENT (5 per cent) shall be added every thirty (30) days thereafter; provided that the amount of such penalty to be added shall not exceed FIFTY PER CENT (50 per cent) of the amount of the license tax due. If the tax is due annually and becomes delinquent on the 31st day of July, the 25 per cent penalty shall be added as of August 1st, and the 5 per cent penalties shall be added on the 1st day of each month thereafter until the penalty reaches 50 per cent of the tax.

Taxes and penalties due from businesses which have been carried on without paying business license taxes shall be calculated from the 1st day of business as though the license had been applied for and renewed each year from the first day of business, but no deposits made or taxes paid. The penalties for any period of operation of a business for which a deposit should have been made pursuant to Section 305.38 of this Code (the period ordinarily covered by the deposit for which taxes are calculated at the end of the year or deposit period and deducted from the deposit) shall be determined on the assumption that the taxes were due and payable on the 1st day of the period. Where the deposit should have been made for a new business, the first day of the period shall be the first day of business. The 25 per cent penalty shall be assessed on the 31st day following the 1st day of the period and the 5 per cent penalty shall be assessed at the end of each thirty (30) day period thereafter. Thus, if a business has operated for a period of six (6) months without making a deposit as required, the penalty on the tax due for that period shall be 50 per cent.

A business operator shall inform the Tax Collector in writing of the date on which the business commenced along with the exact gross sales statements as required by Section 305.38 of this Code upon request of the Tax Collector, and failure to furnish the statement or intentionally furnishing a false statement shall be a misdemeanor.

The tax collector shall have no authority to waive penalties for delinquent payment of taxes, and penalties shall be added automatically. It shall be the obligation of the business to furnish gross sales statements to the City when requested and to pay the tax when due, and failure on the part of the City to send notice of the tax due shall be no excuse for failure to pay the tax on time.

Section 2. If any part of this Ordinance is found to be invalid, all other parts shall remain valid and enforceable.

Section 3. Effective Date. This Ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after final passage and adoption.

PASSED AND ADOPTED by the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea this 14th day of November, 1977, by the following roll call vote:

AYES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Anderson, Arnold, Brown, Hughes, Norberg

Suntory ships 400 cases of its 'signature' whiskey

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

SIXTY DOLLARS for a bottle of whiskey, even in the distiller's own language, is "outrageously expensive." But on the eve of the gift-giving season, it's highly probable that the 400 cases of a particular brand available for U.S. distribution will sell out even before Santa Claus begins his sleighride.

The cut-crystal decanter bottle bears the signature of Keizo Saji, president and chairman of the board of Suntory Ltd., of Osaka, Japan. Twenty-five years ago, Saji's father, Shinjiro Torii, first produced this "Suntory Signature" whiskey when the emperor of Japan wanted to present a gift for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II. Ever since that time, this good grain spirit (of blended findings ranging in age from 15 to 30 years) has been served in the Imperial Palace to visiting dignitaries.

We were among those to whom it was served in Los Angeles during its West Coast introduction. Flashbulbs were popping, bright lights for television cameras flooded the music room of the Biltmore as Saji received the mayor's scroll. It recognized the Japanese industrialist not as a whiskey distiller, but as a world citizen internationally known for his work in the fields of art and ecological programs such as bird and wildlife sanctuaries in Japan.

WE TOOK home a certificate that we had tasted that ultimate in blends of barley spirits. We drank it neat, on the rocks, and it was superbly soft. Coming from one with a tasting history centered for years around Cutty Sark, J & B and Chivas Regal, the words should carry a ring of reality beyond the puffery that surrounded Saji's presence.

With sales of $1.5 billion, Suntory became the world's leading distillery in 1976, with record sales to 68 countries. The phenomenal growth had as its beginning in 1899 a sweet wine, produced from delectable plums, called "Akadama" by Saji's father.

Today, Akadama wines for the U.S. market are produced at Elk Grove, though the incomparable, natural plum essence for Akadama Plum Royale still is imported from Japan. At a luncheon following the presentation tasting of Suntory Signature whiskey, Saji's abiding interest in table wines was revealed, not only in the two wines accompanying the menu (Firestone Vineyards 1975 Estate Bottled Pinot Chardonnay and Suntory 1972 Chateau Lion Vin Rouge), but in the foods prepared by Bernard's from other Suntory wines and spirits. (Also tasted, and just recently released in the Chicago market, are Suntory's first California-produced generic table wines, a remarkably good Chablis, adequate Burgundy and sweet-edged Rose.)

In an interview the following day, I pursued the origins and availability of the estate-bottled Japanese red wine in the Bordeaux-style bottle, called Chateau Lion Vin Rouge. I was aware of the Suntory 400 acres of vitis vinifera planted at the foot of Mount Fuji in Yamanashi Prefecture at an altitude of 1,800 feet. Experiments since 1936 with more than 400 varieties imported from France, Italy, Germany and the United States have, in the last seven years, emphasized Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot, Semillon and Riesling.

WITH A GLINT in his eye, Saji spoke pridefully of new hybrids: a black-skinned Muscat for dry red wines and a registered hybrid called Cabernet-Suntory, resistant to mildew from excessive autumnal humidity. The red Chateau Lion vintage wine, of Cabernet breed in claret style, shows remarkable improvement over a sample tasted two years ago. Two thousand cases per year of the red and white Chateau Lion wines are presently being produced, retailing in Japan for $8 to $10 per bottle, with a token distribution in Honolulu (by special request at Canlis and the Third Floor, both Travel/Holiday Award restaurants).

Pressing to know if and when we might look for these "signature" table wines from Japan, we obtained an answer of disarming honesty: "You make excellent wines here. To bring our wines, with taxes, tariffs, almost prohibitive shipping costs . . . maybe I would find some connoisseurs who will like them. But I do not want to export a middle-class wine to this country."

If you read into this, as I did, that a fine wine is ahead, you'd be right. To that leading question, Saji gave nodding assent. "We've only had five or six years for testing and blending with the Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Cabernet-Suntory. We are aging in American oak barrels from North Carolina and Ohio." Why not Limousin oak from France? "It costs too much and is too difficult to obtain."

Give him only the best . . .

DIVISION 7—CARMEL COMMUNITY AND CULTURAL COMMISSION

280. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION. The Carmel Community and Cultural Commission is hereby established to stimulate and encourage community, cultural, and artistic activities within the City.

281. MEMBERSHIP OF COMMISSION. The Carmel Community and Cultural Commission shall consist of seven (7) members, at least three (3) members of whom shall have a meaningful connection with a creative or performing art.

281.1 APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS. Members of the Commission shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the consent of the City Council, for terms of three (3) years. Terms of members shall be staggered so that at least two (2) terms but no more than three (3) terms shall expire in any one year. Appointments shall be, where possible, made thirty (30) days prior to the beginning of the term of office, in order that the new member shall be able to become familiar with the functions of the Commission prior to being seated. Terms of office shall begin and end on the date of the regular meeting in the month of June of the appropriate year, and terms of all incumbent members are so modified. All members shall be electors of the City, except in the event that no elector with the required expertise can be found, the appointee may be a resident outside the City Limits. In any event, a majority of the Commission shall at all times be composed of electors of the City.

281.1.1 EX-OFFICIO MEMBER. The Community and Cultural Director shall be an ex-officio member of the Commission.

281.2 TERMINATION OF MEMBERS. Members of the Carmel Cultural Commission shall be terminated as members only for the following causes:

a. Resignation of member.
b. Death of the member.
c. A move of the member's residence causing less than a majority of the Commission to be electors of the City.
d. Termination by a majority vote of the City Council.

281.3 ANNUAL MEETING AND ELECTION OF CHAIRMAN. There shall be an annual meeting of the Commission held on the regular meeting date in June of each year, immediately following the business section of the meeting and the seating of new members, at which time the Commission shall elect from within its membership a Chairman who shall be an elector of the City and Vice-Chairman, who shall serve until the annual meeting in the next following year.

281.4 COMMITTEES OF THE COMMISSION. At the annual meeting, after being seated as the Chairman, the new Chairman shall appoint members of the Commission to the standing committees of the Commission.

DIVISION 2—PLANNING COMMISSION

ARTICLE 1—PLANNING COMMISSION ORGANIZATION

290. ESTABLISHMENT OF PLANNING COMMISSION. The Planning Commission of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea is hereby established as originally established by Ordinance No. 65 N.S. which was adopted on November 6, 1946.

291. MEMBERSHIP OF COMMISSION. The Planning Commission shall consist of seven (7) members.

291.1 APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS. Members of the Planning Commission shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the consent of the City Council, for terms of four (4) years. Terms of members shall be staggered so that no more than two (2) terms shall expire in any one (1) year. Appointments shall be, where possible, made thirty (30) days prior to the beginning of the term of office, in order that the new member shall be able to become familiar with the functions of the Commission prior to being seated. Terms of office shall begin and end on the date of the second meeting in May of the appropriate year and terms of all incumbent members are so modified. All members appointed to the Planning Commission after March 4, 1975, shall be electors of the City. Incumbent members of the Planning Commission as of March 4, 1975, shall be entitled to serve out their present terms, Section 291.2 b notwithstanding.

291.2. TERMINATION OF MEMBERS. Members of the Planning Commission shall be terminated as members only for the following causes:

a. Resignation of member.
b. The member ceases to be an elector of the City.
c. Death of the member.
d. Termination by a majority vote of the City Council.

291.3. ANNUAL MEETING AND ELECTION OF CHAIRMAN. There shall be an annual meeting of the Planning Commission held on the second regular meeting date, following the business section of the meeting, in the month of May of each year, immediately following the seating of new members, at which time the Planning Commission shall elect from within its membership a Chairman and Vice-Chairman, who shall serve until the annual meeting in the next following year.

291.4. COMMITTEES OF THE COMMISSION. At the annual meeting, after being seated as the Chairman, the new Chairman shall appoint members of the Commission to the standing committees of the Commission.

291.5. DUTIES, RESPONSIBILITIES AND AUTHORITY. The Planning Commission shall have the duties, responsibilities and authority provided for by the Planning Laws of the State of California, as supplemented by this Code.

Violinist Krachmalnick survives acoustics at King Hall

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

THE MONTEREY COUNTY SYMPHONY played the second concert of its 40th season this week. The first of three performances graced King Hall in Monterey Sunday night and the audience was treated to some fine musicmaking. The featured soloist was violinist Jacob Krachmalnick who brought to the Brahms Violin Concerto in D great style and beautiful phrasing. The orchestra wowed its listeners with an exciting performance of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition.

The concert's opener was the rarely heard Preciosa Overture by Weber. This work is musically very gracious and features the rich vocabulary of its composer. Though written for a Spanish drama, it really does not sound particularly Spanish in character. But one thing was obvious about the performance: thanks to use of newly installed reflecting panels behind the string sections on the wide and shallow stage, the strings are now afforded a more complete sound. In spite of King Hall's unflattering acoustics, the strings displayed a new focus and a bit more body.

IN THE BRAHMS concerto, though, the reflectors had no effect on enhancing the sound of the solo violin. The hall was noticeably unfriendly to Krachmalnick and remains, acoustically, much inferior to the MPC gymnasium where the orchestra used to play. Beyond that, however, Krachmalnick's playing was a joy to hear. The performance was measured and warm, and Krachmalnick's phrasing and tone were sweet and gracious. He played the Fritz Kreisler cadenza in the first movement and clearly balanced the voices and the development of it. Taeuber played a sympathetic accompaniment and drove the orchestra to big sounds and long lines in the many symphonic passages of the work. All the same, it was in the Brahms that the orchestra sounded least confident. This tentativeness was especially notable in those passages of close dialogue between orchestra and soloist. The effect of this was to drag the performance and to take the edge off the excitement of this marvelous work. But for all the right things about the playing, I suspect the playing at the Monday and Tuesday concerts will have honed the orchestra to a finer accomplishment.

It was the opening of Sherwood Hall in Salinas that suggested a change of program at that time. Otherwise we would have heard Pictures at an Exhibition then. At last we have it. It is such a marvelous concert work in the famous Ravel orchestration of Mussorgsky's piano suite, and in its playing by the Monterey County Symphony was a great pleasure to hear. For this concert, Maestro Taeuber was able to obtain our erstwhile principal oboist, David Seeley. Seeley proved himself beautifully in the Brahms concerto and likewise richly enhanced the orchestra in Pictures. Missed in the performance was Ray Fabrizio who was taken suddenly, but temporarily, ill. His stand was taken by Karen King who most admirably filled the bill.

THE PERFORMANCE itself was a bit ragged, but it was excitingly played. One might guess that the orchestra spent more time preparing this than the Brahms, but Pictures is a difficult work. It is filled with sudden changes of tempo and dynamics, and often calls for exposed solos and small ensembles. Taeuber led a colorful reading with the epsisodes being treated to pungent and most effective expression. The brass sounded splendid as a choir and individually. And the winds were very solid with good dynamic shading. This piece also is very generous to the percussion and the playing was immediate and effective. In the finale, The Great Gate at Kiev, Marty Bartoli gave the gong more business than it has had in a long time.

A performance of a demanding orchestral score using a large orchestra is bigger than the sum of the individual parts. It would be easy to enumerate the errors made by the players and, for that matter, the conductor. But a significant performance by our orchestra and its music director is what we have just heard. It was a colorful panorama of vivid sound and music played with atmosphere and style. There is no doubt that it would be pleasing indeed to have Georg Solti or Seiji Ozawa conduct our orchestra, and even better if they brought with them the Boston or Chicago orchestras. But for all the ways of considering this business of making orchestral music, I think the Monterey County Symphony Association's greatest asset, by far, is its music makers.

Political satire slated at Monterey Conference Center

The Loon's Rage, an uproarious political satire about the dangers of atomic power plants, will be performed by the Dell'Arte Company at the Steinbeck Forum in the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey, Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 30-Dec. 1. Admission to the Wednesday performance is restricted to season-ticket holders; the general public will be admitted to the Thursday performance.

The full-length musical comedy lampoons experts who say that "a little radiation never hurt anybody."

Recalling the broad slapstick of the Renaissance and the inspired clowning of the Marx Brothers, the fantasy-drama matches a sinister trio of atomic physicists against heroic animal characters from Native American mythology in a life-and-death struggle to close down a nuclear reactor.

The Dell'Arte Company is a professional troupe of actors and musicians based at the Dell'Arte School of Mime and Comedy in Blue Lake, Calif. Loon's Rage was written by Steve Most, Joan Holden and Jael Weisman. Holden and Weisman formerly collaborated on Dragon Lady's Revenge for the San Francisco Mime Troupe, which won the playwrights an OBIE award for off-Broadway theater in 1973.

The Dell'Arte Company is one of 12 theater companies selected by the California Arts Council to present a program of diverse theater productions at cities throughout the state. The program is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Other performances in the Friends of the Forum Performing Arts series will be presented by the Oakland Ensemble Theater, Jan. 27-28; Los Angeles Pro Visional Theater, Feb. 18-19; ITP/Mark Taper Forum, March 29-30; East-West Players, April 21-22; Los Angeles Mask Theater, May 19-20.

Tickets for the Dec. 1 performance, at $4, are available at Abinante Music, 425 Alvarado, Monterey; Bookworks, in the Country Club Gate Shopping Center, Pacific Grove; Dick Bruhn's, San Carlos and Ocean, Carmel; Countrywide Crafts, in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., Carmel; and at the box offices at Monterey Peninsula College, Hartnell College and Cabrillo College.

The truth is that at the end of a well-savored meal both soul and body enjoy an especial well-being. Physically, at the same time that a diner's brain awakens, his face grows animated, his color heightens, his eyes shine, and a gentle warmth creeps over his whole body. Morally, his spirit grows more perceptive, his imagination flowers, and clever phrases fly to his lips. Brillat-Savarin.

Sunset Views:

Carmel plays host to Russ, German artists

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

IT IS DIFFICULT enough for me to accept November amid such an array of flowers and greenery, but to think of having a Thanksgiving dinner watching a colorful sunset over the Pacific is almost mind boggling for those of us who have spent most of our lives in the winters of the Midwest. Still, I must say that I cannot think of a more beautiful place to spend the holiday. May I extend to you a most happy Thanksgiving Day.

THE DAY after Thanksgiving, the Chamber Music Society is presenting its second concert. The Stuttgart Trio will appear on the Sunset stage Friday at 8 p.m. This excellent piano trio will play works of Haydn, Ravel and Brahms. While most of the tickets are gone in a subscription series, there are some tickets available by calling 624-2085 or at the box office on the night of the performance.

IT WAS standing room only at Queen Elizabeth Hall last Sunday when Tziganka performed." So starts a review in On Stage, a London magazine, when the Russian Folk Ensemble appeared there. Now, Carmel will have the opportunity to see this fine ensemble perform next Wednesday at 8 p.m. The gypsy songs, the balalaika melodies and the cossack dancing in an array of colorful costumes will all be there to enjoy. Call the director's office, 624-3996, for reservations. There are few tickets left for this performance.

I WANT TO REMIND YOU of a very special program this year. The opening of the holiday season — "Christmas in Carmel" — will take place Saturday, Dec. 3, at Sunset Theater at 3 p.m. At that time members of the combined choruses of the local chuches will present a program of Christmas music from many lands. Carols from Germany, France, Spain, Italy and traditional American carols will be sung. Ann Welchner, director of the Sanctuary Choir of the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel, will direct the musical portion of this afternoon with the aid of Dorothy Reiter directing a special children's choir. Richard Bragg of Carmel will be the accompanist for the program. A social hour will follow the musical portion during which traditional holiday sweets of faraway lands will be served. Many organizations, fraternal clubs and ethnic groups have offered to participate in this season's opening. It all is free.

TICKETS FOR the film version of The Nutcracker are now available at the Sunset Center director's office. This fine film, featuring the dancing of Edward Villella, Patricia McBride and Melissa Hayden, will be shown Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 8, 9, 10 and 11. Tickets are $3 and are good for any showing. Do plan to see this enchanting film of a ballet classic.

DID YOU KNOW that we have a duplicate bridge game every Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.? If you like to play bridge, join the group. They meet in room 10 and there is always (or nearly always) a partner available.

AN ARTS AND CRAFTS fair is the activity planned Saturday, in Pushkar, India.

John Kiley guest at autograph party

Local author John Cantwell Kiley will autography copies of his new book, Self-Rescue, at Bookworks, in the Country Club Gate Shopping Center, Pacific Grove, Saturday, Nov. 26, 2-5 p.m.

A Pebble Beach resident, Dr. Kiley has taught at the Naval Postgraduate School as well as many other colleges and universities. In addition to scholarly works, he writes light philosophical verse under the name Johannes Eff for the National Review.

Self-Rescue originated with devices Dr. Kiley developed for coping with grief and evolved into a program designed to show people how they may liberate themselves from the wide range of destructive emotions people generate within themselves.

For more information, phone 372-2242.

Film about football star scheduled at Monterey Library

An All-American Visit to Washington, D.C., a 28-minute color film about football star Ted Kwalick, will be screened at the weekly matinee program at Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey, Thursday, Dec. 1, 2:30 p.m. Everyone is welcome to attend the free 68-minute program.

The film shows Kwalick and his wife, Carolyn, as they visit famous Washington landmarks, including the Smithsonian Institution, Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument and others.

Also to be shown is an 18-minute short, California Gold Rush Country, which includes old drawings, paintings and photographs of that most colorful time in California history; and Climb, a 22-minute film about two rock climbers who climb a sheer rock face in Yosemite Valley.

For more information, phone 372-7391.

Russian folk ensemble coming to Sunset Center

Tziganka, a Russian folk ensemble of gypsy dancers, musicians and singers, will present the second program in the Carmel Festival of Dance, Wednesday, Nov. 30, 8 p.m. at the Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

The troupe was formed in 1974 by Faina Zinova, a Russian gypsy singer known as the Russian Piaf, and Bibs Ekkel, a balalaika player. The troupe, formed to perform and propagate Russian folk and gypsy music, includes Cossack dancers, balalaika players, accordion players, comedians, guitarists and Miss Zinova, who sings the traditional Russian music.

Miss Zinova started her career at the age of 16 with a traveling gypsy musical ensemble with whom she sang in theaters all over Russia. A few years later she entered the Kishinyov and Odessa Philharmonias where she worked for several years in both cabarets and concerts.

Her songs range from soulful, melancholy gypsy melodies and romances to the songs of vodka drinking and carefree merriment.

The program includes the hilarious balalaika "juggling" number in which, in the middle of an instrumental piece, the balalaika is suddenly spun around, up in the air, twisted behind the head and back, under one leg and turned back to front while being continuously played.

The Argonoff Dancers are among the best in Russia today. They have eight or nine dazzling numbers, gorgeously costumed, revealing the music of the Russian provinces in all its greatness.

And, for comedy, there is The Fight of the Dwarfs, a dance from the frozen north of Russia, in which two dancers are locked in deadly combat, fighting and tumbling across the stage, finally "falling" off the stage and into the audience to scare the wits out of the front row.

The gypsy tradition preserved by Tziganka (a Russian word meaning gypsy girl) is different from the European gypsy tradition of persecution by each country they visited. The gypsies of Russia were welcome guests whose style of entertainment was valued and whose traditions found their way into much Russian music.

Tickets, at $6.75 and $5.75, are available at the director's office of Sunset Center. For more information, phone 624-3996.

Ice show in Salinas

The Great American Ice Show, a skating spectacular, will present three performances at the Salinas Community Center, 940 N. Main St., Salinas, Tuesday-Thursday, Nov. 29-Dec. 1. Performances begin at 8 p.m.

Tim Wood, U.S. Olympic medalist and winner of the 1968-69 and 1970 world championships, produces and directs the extravaganza. His partner, Dick Curd, was NBC-TV director of national and international marketing.

Wood said the show was created to fill the need for wholesome live family entertainment. "Big shows don't move outside cities like Dallas," he said. "We're taking The Great American Ice Show to the people who never see such productions."

The show has a cast of more than 30 skaters including principal and pair skaters, and presents six major contemporary musical production numbers along with comedy and variety acts.

Tickets, at $6 and $5 for adults and $5 and $4 for children, are available at Carmel Music, Dolores and Fifth, Carmel. All seats are reserved.

For more information, phone Salinas, 1-758-7351.

Alpine Inn is a Carmel charmer

ADVERTISEMENT
Reprinted from The Review

IF YOU'VE come to Carmel expecting to discover quaint, charming little restaurants serving unusual, European cuisine, we have good news. The Alpine Inn, tucked away at the end of the Paseo San Carlos on San Carlos St. between Ocean and Seventh Aves., fits the description perfectly.

It's tiny, with a total seating capacity of barely 20; it's quaintly decorated with traditional Swiss print curtains and cushions; and it serves Swiss/German/European food prepared by a talented young European chef.

Because the Alpine Inn is so small, and because it serves unusual dishes, the dinner menu is limited to three entrees each evening, served as complete dinners for a fixed price. Dinners include cheese fondue, salad, fresh vegetables, bread and butter in addition to the main course. The only other items on the menu are appetizers, beverages and three intriguing desserts. Incidentally, each week's menu repeats through the month, so you can plan a return visit in advance.

A good cheese fondue is served immediately after the menu is presented so you can snack and read simultaneously, and we guarantee you will finish the fondue down to the very last drop.

As might be expected, the Alpine Inn serves a good number of veal entrees, fresh fish, seafood and poultry. The well-rounded menu also offers beef and lamb, frequently prepared en brochette.

We dined on a Thursday, when the menu offered Kassler Rippchen und Sauerkraut, Fresh Snapper in Herb Sauce and Jagerschnitzel. Random samplings from the October menu include Duck Robespierre stuffed with sauteed apples, Swiss style Paprika Schnitzel, Lamb Chops in Mint Gravy, Filet of Sole Meuniere and Scallops in Lobster Sauce.

LORE PARSONS, who presides over the Alpine Inn and who is a native of Germany, deserves special praise for her wonderful Swiss-style dinner salad which is served in an oversized glass goblet. It contains green and black olives, fresh mushrooms, cucumber, tomatoes, red onion rings, artichoke hearts, hard-cooked egg, parsley and dill, all lightly tossed in a mild, flavorful dressing.

Translations of the Thursday entrees gave us smoked roast pork with sauerkraut, fresh Monterey Bay red snapper and a "hunter's schnitzel" of veal with some very interesting vegetables.

Each dish is presented in a copper pan, barely moments from stovetop or oven, and the food is fresh and hot.

Our serving of smoked pork slices was generous and the ruddy-red pork was tender and tasty. Homemade sauerkraut — a far cry from the canned variety — was accompanied by whipped potatoes.

A dining companion ordered the snapper, which was served with home-fried potatoes, fresh carrots, and green beans. Garnishes of parsley, pimiento, lemon slices and black olives made the plate especially attractive. An unusual suace, seasoned with thyme, basil, oregano and bay leaf, turned the simple fish into a most interesting dish.

We also sampled the Jagerschnitzel, made of a tender boneless veal cutlet topped with oranges, stuffed green and black olives and the traditional "jager" accompaniments of lots of fresh mushrooms and tomatoes; the dish is the German counterpart of the French Veal Chasseur.

Dessert fans will find the Schwarzwalder Kirschtorte, many thin layers high, the Apfelstrudel and the Kaiserschmarren eminently satisfying, as is the rich, spiced coffee.

The Alpine Inn also serves delightful lunches, both indoors and on the patio. It is open daily and reservations are strongly advised.

Stuttgart Trio visits on Friday

The Stuttgart Trio will present the second concert in the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula season, Friday, Nov. 25, 8 p.m. at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

The program will include selections by Haydn, Ravel and Brahms.

Trio members are Monika Leonhard, piano; Rainer Kussmaul, violin; and Peter Hahn, cello. The trio received the Mendelssohn Prize in Berlin and won first prize at the International Competition in Munich within the members' first year together in 1968.

Following a successful New York debut in 1972 under the auspices of the Carnegie Hall Corp., the Stuttgart Trio appeared in concert on radio and television. The artists studied with the distinguished masters Arturo Michelangeli, piano; Ricard Odnopossof, violin; and Ludwig Hoelscher, cello.

Of a performance in San Francisco, the Chronicle said: "Neither advance publicity nor reputation prepared one for the excellence of the Stuttgart Piano Trio . . . It was stunning, as fine a trio as one is likely to encounter, including all-star get-togethers. It was a magnificent performance."

Tickets, for balcony seats only, are $4.50 for adults and $2.50 for students and enlisted military personnel. For more information, phone 624-4297.

Jazz pianist at MPC

Jazz pianist Tom Ranier will join the Monterey Peninsula College Jazz Ensemble in a concert Wednesday, Nov. 30, at 8 p.m. at the MPC Theater, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

Ranier is a graduate of California State University and has studied piano with Craig Rees, Earl Voorhies, Joanna Harris and the late John Crown. He has worked with Englebert Humperdinck, Joey Bishop and Helen Reddy and is under contract to Warner Brothers Records.

Admission is $2. For more information, phone 649-1150, ext. 340.

Martha McCoy joins choir

Martha McCoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McCoy, of 3585 Edgefield Place in Carmel, is performing with the Choraliers, the campus choir at Texas Woman's University in Denton, Tex.

The Choraliers is a popular performance choir that entertains at special programs throughout the state.

Miss McCoy is a junior music therapy major and a graduate of Salinas High School.

Public Notice

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 77-31
AN ORDINANCE REQUIRING EXHIBITING LICENSES FOR BUSINESS AND COIN OPERATED MACHINES AND OTHER SIMILAR DEVICES

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Part III, Division 2, Section 302.6 of the Municipal Code of Carmel-by-the-Sea is amended to read as follows:

302.6 LICENSE EXHIBITING.

a). Fixed Place of Business. Every person having a license under the provisions of this division for carrying on a business at a fixed place of business, shall keep such license posted for exhibition while in force in some conspicuous part of said place of business.

b) No Fixed Place of Business. Every person having such a license and not having a fixed place of business, shall carry such license with him at all times while carrying on the business for which the same was granted.

c) Machines or Devices. The license for each machine or device licensed pursuant to this division shall be displayed on the machine or device so that City Officials inspecting the business premises can verify that a valid license exists. No machine or device licensed under this division shall be kept, stored or maintained in any area of business premises open to the public unless a valid license is in force for it and is displayed in the manner required.

d) Police Inspection. Every person having a license shall produce, exhibit or point out the display of same whenever requested to do so by any Police Officer, or by any officer authorized to issue, inspect or collect licenses.

Section 2. Effective Date. This Ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption.

PASSED AND ADOPTED by the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea this 14th day of November, 1977, by the following roll call vote:

Reunion with Francis Whitaker

Ex-councilman, blacksmith visits Carmel friends

By E. G. BALAN

HE WHO knows only his own generation remains always a child." These words are inscribed on the library at the University of Colorado, where Francis Whitaker holds an honorary doctorate, but they could well have been spoken by the man himself.

A former Carmel city councilman for 11 years, Whitaker feels the spirit of Carmel is rooted in appreciation of its past and that the path to the future may best be seen by looking back for direction, back to a simpler time when people walked instead of driving.

In 1927, when Francis Whitaker first took Charlie Gould's old stagecoach over the hill from Monterey to Carmel, down Ocean

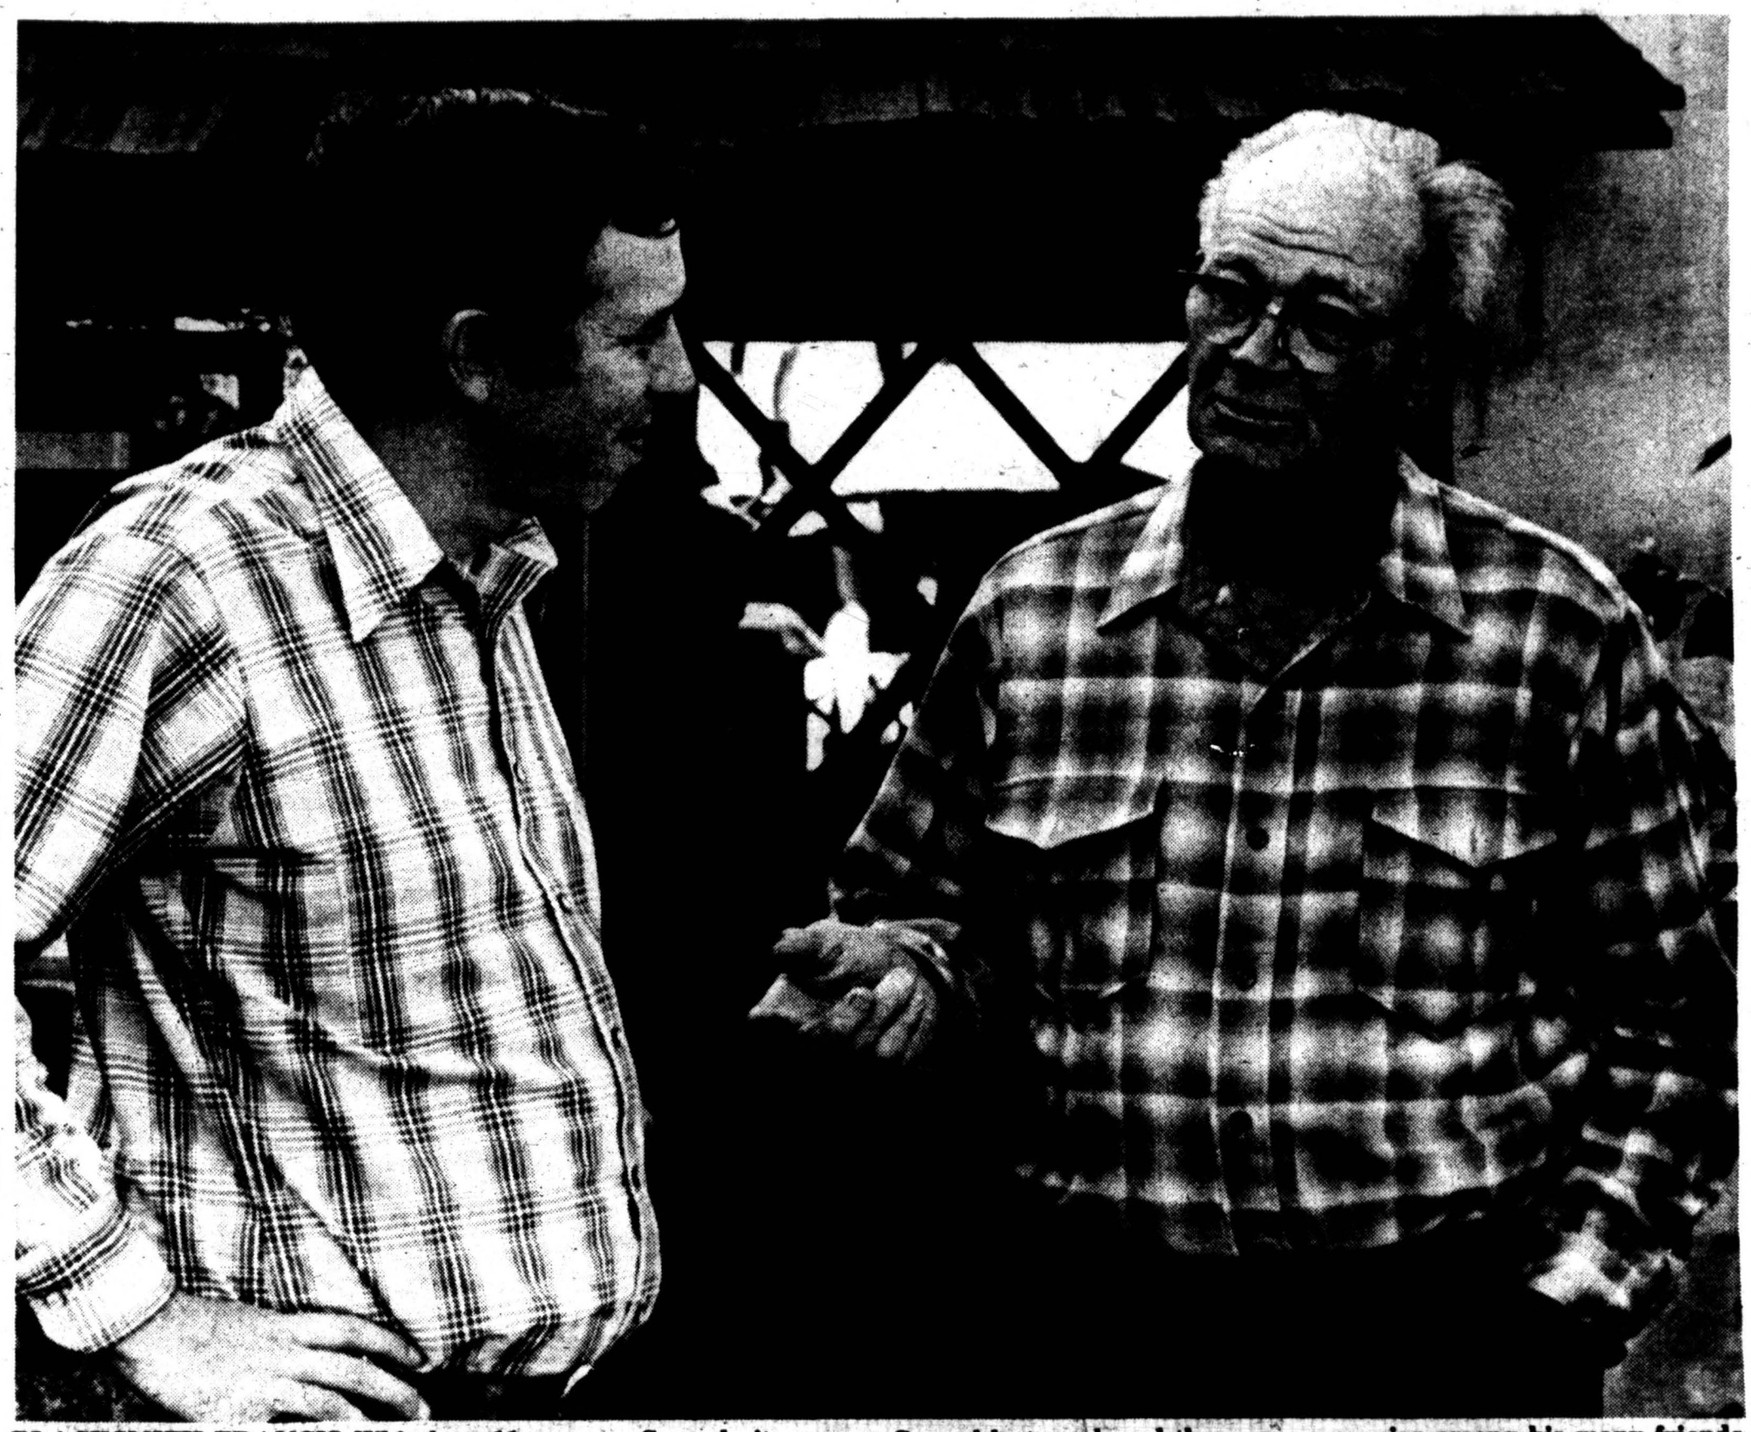
SECTION II



BLACKSMITH FRANCIS Whitaker, 11 years a Carmel city councilman, talks government with Jack Collins, the new city administrator. Whitaker has retired in Aspen, Colo., but he visited Carmel last week and there was a reunion among his many friends. (George T. C. Smith photos)

Avenue, the only paved street in town, he had only intended to visit for the weekend. It turned out to be a long weekend. He stayed 35 years.

Whitaker established The Forge in the Forest, a blacksmith shop on Junipero and Fifth, and operated it until 1963, when he "retired" to Aspen, Colo. Take any iron hinge, sign bracket, stair railing in town, most likely he made it. And any attempt at development of the town, most likely he fought it. He was one of the earlier people to foresee what Carmel could become and to try to preserve the quality of the community. Whitaker was instrumental in saving Point Lobos from becoming a military bombing target and in keeping Junipero Street from becoming a four-lane freeway.

John Steinbeck was his drinking partner. He helped Carl Cherry develop the famed "Cherry rivet." Whitaker was filled with these and other reminiscences as he sat in The Forge in the Forest last week, where he once operated his one-man forge, and shared his thoughts about the town and his life here.

Q: Carmel is a world-famous tourist spot now. Was it like this when you were first here?

W: I can tell you the story about when I came here, the very first day in 1927, 50 years ago. I came on the bus from Santa Barbara to Monterey and I took the old Carmel stage that Charlie Gould ran over the old hill, down Ocean Avenue. Ocean Avenue was the only paved street. I came here to visit a girl I'd been to school with, and I thought I would surprise her. I'd written that I was coming to Carmel some time during the year. She worked at a little restaurant down about where the Tuck Box is now. First thing I did was go down to the beach. When I came in later that afternoon to have dinner at this restaurant, it was no surprise at all to her. Because this girl's roommate had reported she saw a young man on the beach she didn't know, and it must be me, because I was the only stranger in town.

Q: That tells the story pretty well.

W: Used to take you four hours to drive to Big Sur on the old dirt road, and the road ended at Nepenthe. It stopped and the Lower Coast Trail and the Upper Coast Trail took off at Cone Summit, and once a year after the winter rains, the county would go in and maintain those trails. And they went off all the way down to Partington. I can't remember where the Lower Coast Trail ended, about where the road comes across from Hunter Liggett. The Upper Coast Trail continues all the way on out to where the Hearst Castle is.

Q: Are there still places in Carmel where one could go to see things you made in your blacksmith shop?

W: Walk up and down Ocean Avenue. Lots of door hardware, lots of sign brackets, the facade of Derek Rayne, the Harrison Library, the Las Tiendas Court, with the stairs going up. I made that stair rail in 1927, 1928 maybe; the Santa Catalina School in Monterey, the chapel inside and outside. Those are some of the best examples.

Q: Francis, do you think those old days of Carmel are gone forever?

W: Yes and no. For one thing, someday we're gonna run out of oil. People are gonna have to walk. For another thing, there are enough people here who are cultured, educated, conservationist, to want to protect what they have here. And that's the important thing. I think you can see that. My first recollections of Perry Newberry, the editor and founder of the Pine Cone — Perry's slogan was "build a fence," and I think that quality of the town you can never destroy. Inspire people to preserve that attitude and maybe someday you'll be able to build that fence. I'll come help drive nails.

Q: Was Perry Newberry the editor when you were here? He must have done a tremendous amount to shape Carmel.

W: Oh he did. He fought for the trees up and down the center of Ocean Avenue, for the Forest Theater, for the beach, for the things that really give Carmel its quality. Frank Devendorf came before Perry or about the same time. He was a developer. Perry was an antideveloper. And his engineer laid out the streets too damn small. Forty feet wide, 35 feet wide, straight up and down the hills, never paid any attention to drainage, nothing. He didn't anticipate the automobile.

Q: What sort of vehicles were here when you came in '27?

W: Wagons. There were still some. The city was laid out I believe in 1906. And it was laid out on a grid section. This was quite a bit like Pacific Grove. After I came, just after I came, Pacific Grove had been a Methodist retreat and they used to lock the gates every night.

Q: Peter's Gate?

W: Yes. David Avenue and Lighthouse Avenue. They locked the streets every night at 10 o'clock. Finally, some unscrupulous young people just drove their cars through the gates and knocked them down and they never were put up again. Carmel was also sort of a religious retreat. In fact, there was a deed restriction in every piece of property against sale or possession of alcoholic beverages.

'It's gratifying to come back and see things'

Q: When did you begin serving on the city council?

W: 1952. And I served a total of 11 years. I was elected three times. I shortened my last term by moving to Colorado.

Q: I understand you have a degree from the University of Colorado.

W: Yes, a doctorate, and one from the University of Illinois. They're in connection with my work in city government and conservation. I still serve the city of Aspen in a small way on the board of adjustments, but I served for over 20 years on planning commissions and the city council here in Carmel. In Carmel, I was very active in protecting the beach and acquiring the Carmel River mouth beach, establishing the rules of Pt. Lobos, establishing the marine reserve in the waters around Pt. Lobos and I was president of the Pt. Lobos League for five years.

Q: Those are impressive accomplishments.

W: They pay off. It's so gratifying to come back and see these things. Otherwise, they could have been overdeveloped and completely ruined. There were some pretty tough battles. One of the worst I remember

Doolittle tells officials to sell Flanders mansion

MORE THAN 100 persons heard a baker's dozen of suggestions last Wednesday, but the elusive ingredient for the Flanders mansion recipe is yet to be found.

Perhaps it was a matter of too many cooks in the kitchen. A town meeting, organized by the Carmel Citizens Committee, presented no new ideas for possible uses of the city-owned mansion. There was one exception, however.

William Doolittle, nephew of the late Robert A. Doolittle, the original owner of the adjoining Doolittle property, said the city should sell the mansion and use the profit to buy a residential care facility for Carmel's elderly.

"The house right now is an albatross," Doolittle said.

He claimed the city's original $250,000 outlay for the house and the adjoining 14 acres could be recovered in full.

Argument for and against a care facility had mounted during the evening meeting. Those who favored the idea argued that the city provides no such facility for the aged. Opponents claimed the house would be unsafe. They also said that the mansion could house only six residents at best.

Doolittle countered by saying the funds from selling the mansion could build a house able to house twice that number.

THE MEETING attracted the entire City Council and most of the Planning Commission.

City Administrator Jack Collins explained the history of the 53-year-old mansion to the audience. He said the house does not rate "mansion" status. He also noted if the city ever sold the estate, current tenant Bradford Dow would have the first option to buy.

"The city is absolutely uninterested in selling," Mayor Gunnar Norberg told the audience.

Councilman Mike Brown agreed. "Dow has been notified by the city and he will be moving out this spring," he said.

Councilmen Bernard Anderson and Helen Arnold made brief presentations. Mrs. Arnold suggested establishing a police substation in the servant's quarters of the estate. Anderson said a portion of the property could be used as a parking lot.

Councilman David Hughes attended but did not speak. The planning commissioners also remained mum.

Collins emphasized to the audience the city must declare its intentions for the house by April, when Dow is scheduled to be evicted.

OTHER SUGGESTED uses for the mansion included:

MUSIC SCHOOL

Lyn Bronson, founder of the Carmel Conservatory of Music, sought to relocate his school in the mansion.

The Carmel resident says the conservatory would teach between 100 and 200 students.

He proposed to create a "successful school to benefit the community." Bronson was the first to ask permission to use the mansion.

RESIDENCE

Earl Moser, a former Carmel resident, said the city should continue to lease the estate as a residence, until it determines the best possible use for the estate.

"There may be a proper use in the future, but why do we have to rush in now?" he asked.

MUSEUM

Relics of Carmel's past could be housed in an historical center at the Flanders Estate, said Helen Stern, of Carmel.

SELL

Sell the mansion and use the profits in conjunction with the Flanders-Doolittle park plan, suggested Rowland Scheffler, also a resident.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR GARDEN WATER

An inexpensive Leisure-Time drip watering system can save up to 70% of your garden water. It is the finest way to apply the water on the plants, where it is needed (in the ground, in planter boxes or in hanging baskets).

When your garden changes, the watering system can also be easily changed. A complete system can be installed in one weekend or less, or we can do it for you.

Please come see us about your watering problems.

PARTY PLANS

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

Tired of turkey? For a change of pace, we offer a sturdy stew. This is especially good on our increasingly cool evenings. It is comparatively inexpensive and filling.

College Beef Stew

Brown one pound of beef cubes in hot beef fat. Add 1 quart water, 1 can tomatoes, 2 large chopped onions, ½ cup each of pinto beans and lentils, 1 bay leaf. Simmer two hours until meat and beans are tender. Add 4 peeled, cut-up potatoes and one package frozen mixed vegetables. Cook for 15 minutes. Add one can small kernel corn, salt and pepper to taste. Stir, then spoon dumplings over all. Cover closely allowing to steam 15 minutes. Serve dumplings in a separate bowl to keep them light and fluffy.

Match-Along Dumplings

Mix and sift together 1 cup flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt. Add a scant cup of milk mixing together. Dough should be stiff. Drop by teaspoonfuls into stew. Chopped parsley or green spring onion with tops added to the dry ingredients make more flavorsome dumplings.

There is no place like home for the holidays. Start off with Grapefruit Dip but don't be fooled by the title. This is not for afternoon tea. Mix 6 ounces of cream cheese with 8 drops Tabasco, L and P, 1½ teaspoons lemon juice together until well blended and fluffy. Remove sections from half a grapefruit cutting them into small pieces and adding to cheese mixture. Spoon this into grapefruit shell garnishing with paprika and minced fresh parsley. Place shell in attractive dish and arrange cold, raw vegetables around same. Cauliflower, celery strips, carrot ones also and whole cooked cleaned shrimp are good accompaniments to this unusual dip which will keep several days in the refrigerator.

College Crisps

To make these, take 2½ cups Quaker Oats and mix with 1 cup sugar and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Mix with 1 tablespoon melted butter and 2 eggs stirred in without beating. Drop by teaspoonfuls on foil-covered cookie sheet.

Barbecued Ham

Fry in its own fat cut from the edges of rather thick slices of cold cooked ham. When they begin to crisp at the edges, draw them to side of pan and add to fat a pinch of mustard, some brown sugar and a little white pepper and California wine vinegar. Turn ham over in sauce several times and serve pouring sauce over meat.

Avocado Luxo with Cranberries

Mash peeled avocadoes with silver fork adding ½ a peeled onion with silver fork. Add half a minced onion, some lemon juice mixed into bottled mayonnaise. Encircle each with a ring of cranberries. It makes a very pretty picture.

Cheese Wafers

Convenient to have for unexpected guests reminding us of cheese bits we ate as children. Combine ½ pound cheddar cheese with ¼ pound butter, a token of salt and white pepper creating a beautiful mixture. Add 1½ cups sifted flour. Form mixture into roll 1 inch in diameter wrapping in wax paper. Chill for 2 hours. Slice roll into thin wafers baking them in 350-degree oven until lightly browned. Makes about 8 dozen cookies.

Cal-Am ends rationing 'hotline'

The rationing hotline at California-American Water Co., opened Feb. 19 when rationing went into effect, will be discontinued next Wednesday.

Calls concerning rationing regulations, meter reading instruction and conservation techniques previously made to the 375-5117 number should be directed to the company's main office, 373-3051, the firm said.

Although the hotline handled as many as 575 calls a day in the early days of rationing, volume has dropped to less than 40 per day recently. Many of those calls are more properly made to the Water Management Agency.

Requests for any type of variances (medical, guests, survival of landscaping, livestock, commercial-residential combined use) must be directed to the Water Management Agency at 624-2299.

If a major change in the rationing program is ordered, the hotline will be reestablished and restaffed, said Leslie Johnson, spokesman for Cal-Am.

Backgammon

by Omar Sharif

Black rolls 4-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Although White has already borne off 12 of his men, Black is still very much in the game. Even if White manages to get his men around to his home board without exposing one of them to a shot, Black is hardly behind in the race. And should White stay out for a move or two, or should he enter on the 2-point and should Black then point on that blot, Black would be a huge favorite.

Therefore, Black should strive to play as safely as possible. His plan must be to bring his men into his home board without getting hit, for that would give White additional time to get his men out.

Therefore, it would seem that White should play the man from his 8-point to his 6-point for the 2, and from the 5-point to the 1-point for the 4. That does not expose any man to being hit. However, that is a very short-range view of the position.

If Black plays as above, he will leave himself with four men in his outer board and he will have great problems in getting them home safely. In addition, the extra man on the 1-point will be out of play, and Black will have reduced the number of builders that he has bearing on the 2-point.

Strange as it seems, we suggest that Black play a man from his 9-point all the way to the 3-point. With a White man on the bar, that exposes Black to a shot only if White rolls 5-2 or 5-4. In other words, Black will be an 8 to 1 favorite to escape being hit.

And even if White does succeed in hitting Black, Black will not yet have lost the game. For White must break his point in Black's home board to hit, and he now exposes himself to a barrage of return shots.

The slight risk now should mean greater safety later, since Black will have cleared a point in his outer board.

The price tag on an appliance doesn't tell you the total cost. Using ESP does.

The more efficiently an appliance runs, the less energy it uses, and the more money you save. That's why the price tag isn't the whole cost. You have to add the cost of operating the appliance during the years you own it, just as you have to consider the miles per gallon when you buy a car, as well as the sticker price.

If you decide to buy an air conditioner, refrigerator-freezer, freezer or gas range, you should know about an easy way to check its efficiency in terms of money-savings. Look for the ESP tag (it stands for Energy Savings Payback), on the more efficient models at participating "We Care" dealers.

Here's how ESP works. A pilotless-ignition gas range, for example, uses about 40% less energy than a similar model with constantly burning gas pilot lights. Comparative testing shows that the pilotless-ignition gas range could save your family up to $126 in energy costs over the 13 years you probably will use it, based on gas rates in effect on October 1, 1977. And that's the figure you'll find on the ESP tag. That means that although the pilotless-ignition model may cost a bit more to buy, it will save you money in the long run, because it will cost you less to operate.

Comparing costs on the basis of efficiency is a good thought. And it's easy to do with ESP.

PETPOURRI

By JUDITH A. EISNER

THERE'S NO DENYING that Christmas is on its way. As soon as those turkey bones find their way into the soup kettle, thoughts turn to Christmas goose — and to puppies and kittens.

More families add a live pet to their homes at Christmastime than any other time of year. As the "Pets for sale" ads promise, they "will hold for Christmas" the kitten or puppy of your choice.

But will it be a good choice? Despite the clamorings the small-fry at your home may make, do you really want a dog or cat as a part of your family? And even if you think you'd like one, should you have one?

A friend of ours — a mature, married man — recently purchased a very lovely, purebred, six-month-old puppy. The puppy was an excellent choice. He was healthy, a beautiful representative of his breed, and possessed a remarkable poise and bearing for such a young animal. We congratulated our friend on his wise selection.

A short while ago he called and mentioned that he was thinking about finding another home for the dog. What was wrong, we asked.

He couldn't put his finger on it. The dog was still well-behaved, was not especially destructive or demanding, was in good health — he just wasn't sure whether having a dog was a good idea.

Now this man and his wife have never had dogs before. There are a few resident cats at their house, but cats are very different from dogs. Cat require care, of course, but they really don't require the time and energy a dog demands.

A PUPPY NEEDS training. Even if you don't think you want a formally "obedience trained" pet, he still must be taught the dos and don'ts, the thousand things that are off limits and those that are permitted. First of all, he must be housebroken, and kittens usually join a family with that knowledge already planted in their brains.

Puppies need to be played with. You can give a kitten a catnip mouse or a ball or a feather and it will play by itself, amusing you through its antics. You can roll the ball for it, but there's really no need.

With puppies, you play ball with the dog, making a game for two of you. Dogs don't occupy themselves unless they're getting into trouble. Chewing up the bedspread or digging up the rosebushes keeps them busy for a time. So does roaming the neighborhood getting into mischief. But, like young children, dogs need to have their energies properly (acceptably) channeled and, like young children, they require "parental" assistance and guidance.

You can put a young kitten in a towel-lined carton in a snug corner the first night and it will go to sleep (with perhaps a plaintive mew or two). No matter what you do with or to a young puppy the first night (short of capitulating and taking him to bed with you), he'll howl his head off.

You provide kitty with a clean sandbox. You take puppy outdoors 25 or 30 times a day and mop up after him another 15 times until he's mastered the fundamentals of housebreaking.

You give kitty the aforementioned toy and she exercises herself; or if you let her outdoors, she certainly gets all the exercise she requires. You have to walk with puppy, throw sticks for him to retrieve, teach him to walk on a leash.

Kitty, unless she's a Persian that requires daily care, takes care of her own coat. Puppy not only depends on you for grooming, but also finds ways of making the job more difficult. A cat avoids a mud puddle; a dog seeks one out, it seems.

You can go to work and leave kitty without a qualm. She'll curl up and doze the day away. Puppy will howl and annoy the neighbors, or he'll wreak havoc with the living room carpet, or try to dig under the fence in his run. You have to confine him safely or take him with you but, most of all, you have to worry about him.

Maybe that's what this friend meant when he wasn't sure why the new puppy wasn't working out. Dogs require too much worrying about if you're a halfway conscientious person. Getting a new dog is not simply plunking him down in the middle of the room Christmas morning; it's a lifetime of responsibility and care and worry and expense.

But it's not all taking on the puppy's part.

In return for your care you receive allegiance and love, companionship and fun, protection and the indefinable something that happens when your dog lays his head upon your knee and looks up at you.

To millions of dog-owning families, the joy of dog ownership apparently outweigh the tangibles of caring for their pet. But to some people, it may prove more a burden than a joy. These are the folk who should think about and weigh carefully the decision to get a dog for the family this Christmas.

America and the Monterey Peninsula

Let us give thanks.

On this Thanksgiving, let us remember the many blessings we enjoy in California. This year, we are all concerned with the things we have to do without and the prospect of further shortages in the future.

But as Americans and Californians, we can depend on an abundance of freedoms and no shortage of ingenuity in coping with the inconvenience of our temporary situation.

California-American Water Company wishes to thank you for all your conservation efforts and we hope you will have a memorable Thanksgiving Day.

Remember When?

50 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 25, 1927:

CARMELITES WHO ARE IN CURRENT MAGAZINES

Carmel is well represented in current magazines this month. Authors who live here or have lived here have a number of short stories or essays in magazines.

Upton Sinclair has an article in the new Bookman entitled Mr. Mencken Calls on Me. Benjamin de Cassares writes of Robinson Jeffers in the same publication in an article called Robinson Jeffers, Tragic Terror.

CHRISTMAS TREES FOR FUTURE YEARS

Thought is already being given to the Community Christmas tree, one of Carmel's annual celebrations of unique interest.

For many people in Carmel, the sight of this labor at a tree preservation on Ocean Avenue will be one of the happiest moves made by the city for a long time. The Pine Cone, lover of trees, expresses the appreciation of a thousand other tree lovers for the work in hand.

OPENS TELEGRAPH OFFICE

The Carmel branch of the Western Union opened last Monday in their new quarters on Dolores Street.

Better accommodations are provided for the public by this change as there is more space in the new building. A direct wire service to San Francisco has not yet been installed, but it is probable that Carmel will have this service after the first of the year.

VILLAGE NEWS REEL

Basketball practice is going on before and after school at the new ground on the city block. Until the fence has been built around the ground, motorists must pass with great caution, or the city will be responsible for heavy damages through the injury to some child, who to get the ball, must run out upon Ocean Avenue and into the traffic.

25 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 28, 1952:

BAY SCHOOL'S INDEPENDENCE ELECTION

The long campaign by the Bay School District to withdraw from the Monterey High School District in order to join the Carmel Unified School District will be brought to a conclusion Monday, when Highlands residents will cast their votes on the issue.

From the first stages of the movement, Monterey school

THROUGH THE HOOP

Basketball fans who like their games on the quiet side will enjoy the games at the newly soundproofed Carmel High School gym.

The shrill blast of the referee's whistle has a mellow sound now and fans need no longer be irritated by the whistle tooting.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENT:

Yes, we have no bananas, but we do have a pineapple candle seven inches tall and burns 100 hours, and when you stick toothpicks in it and hang cheese, olives and hors d'oeuvres, you have something for a cocktail party and a centerpiece on the table that is most unusual. You can get these and many other candles at CANDLES OF CARMEL, opposite the Pine Inn. P.S. They're only $1.50.

10 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 30, 1967:

FOREST THEATER SIGNS

In a town where signs are hard to get approved, it seems strange that two signs advertising the same function are located side by side.

The Cultural Commission last Monday was reminded that it would take "an act from City Council" to remove one of the two Forest Theater signs at the corner of Ocean and Junipero.

The commission indicated it felt one Forest Theater sign was enough.

HIGH CITY SALARIES

Dr. Marvin Steckler went through a long list of statistics at the City Council meeting, all of which pointed up the sharp increase in city salaries over the past nine years.

The following are some interesting observations made by the consultant:

The average city employee earns $619.22 each month. The percentage increase in salaries was more than twice the cost of living. In the past ten years the city employees' salary has risen 63 per cent.

"Salaries are not even in the ball park with the benefits to the city," Dr. Steckler said.

SAFEWAY CHANGES

The new Carmel Rancho Safeway Store, which is expected to be open in late December, will carry many nonfood items, according to John Philpot of the San Francisco publicity department.

There will be notions, some clothing, yarn, books, greeting cards, candles, kitchen and glassware and a health aid department.

Advent observances planned

All Saints'

All Saints' Episcopal Church will celebrate the Festival Eucharist today, Thanksgiving Day, at 10:30 a.m. The church asks for donations of food and clean clothing for distribution to two alcoholic rehabilitation centers — Beacon House in Pacific Grove and Ohlhoff House in San Francisco.

Sunday is the beginning of Advent, the time of year when Christians celebrate the coming of Christ to earth, and the coming of the Christ spirit into their own lives. The Rev. Raymond Hess will conduct the Advent Sunday celebration.

Carmel Mission

Sunday Masses will be conducted at 7, 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. and at 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.

The Legion of Mary meets each Monday at 2:30 p.m. in the rectory. Friday bingo games continue at 7:30 p.m. in Crespi Hall to benefit the Junipero Serra School.

Christian Science

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the title of the Christian Science lecture-sermon this Sunday at 11 a.m.

The church will sponsor a free lecture at Sunset Center on next Thursday at 8 p.m. George Louis Aghamalian of New York will speak on the subject of "Diana or Christ?"

Community

The Rev. Howard E. Bull will deliver the Advent Sunday sermon, titled "The Hope of the World," this week at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula. The service is scheduled at 10:30 a.m.

Wayfarer

The Rev. Paul Woudenberg will deliver a third sermon in a series on the eighth-century prophets. This Sunday the topic will be the prophet Micah. Services are at 9:30 and 11 a.m. The Wayfarer is a United Methodist Church.

Presbyterian

"Christmas and the Cry of Man" is the title of the Rev. Deane Hendricks's sermon. This will be the first in a series of sermons for the Advent season, conducted at 8:30, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Clergy comments

Who to thank today and why you should

By the Rev.
HOWARD E. BULL

I SUPPOSE most folks would expect a preacher to start off saying we ought to thank God for everything.

Well, I suppose the pious preachers would. But I'm not so sure that we ought to give Him the credit for everything.

Of course, we clergy types sort of hold to the idea that since God started off the whole shebang, He deserves all the thanks we can muster. After all, He wrote out a few things we should not do (I guess He wrote them because Moses had a bad memory), and a lot of people since then haven't done so well by them. You know, murders and theft and fooling around with other people's spouses and all that sort of thing. It kind of makes you wonder if God has all that control.

And then there's that old story about the Bishop of Something who surveyed the lush fields ready for harvest and told his farmer-constituent, "You ought to give thanks to God for His bounty. He has certainly blessed you with this grand crop and deserves credit as your partner." The farmer replied, "Yeah. But you ought to have seen it when He had it all by Himself."

WELL, I SAT down on the first of the month and paid the bills. And I wondered if just writing the checks was good enough. When the alarm went off this morning, the electricity had been on all night so the clock was on time. When I turned on the faucet in the bathroom, the water was there in full pressure. And the water was just the right temperature when I showered. My clothes closet had items in it that I wouldn't have any idea how to sew — or how to "spin" the cloth (or however it's done with synthetics these days). The car miraculously started (and how many people worked to produce the tires and the gasoline?). Nobody crashed into me on my way to the study. I went to lunch (having foregone breakfast by choice) and for a couple of dollars a mighty army had had a part in assembling the things on the menu which I enjoyed.

Yep, Sunday rolled around. Same thing. That is, until 10:30 a.m. The choir director was there. So was the organist and a multitude of volunteer voices. And the ushers and greeters as well as the coffee-hour workers. Equally unsurprising was the "full house" of folks who came to worship.

THERE'S NOTHING original about what I'm telling you. It's been going on for a long time and untold numbers have written similarly. It's pretty common. Maybe that's the trouble. We've accepted it all. And don't think about it much.

What's there to be so all-fired thankful about? Maybe the fact that you and I awakened this morning! And the day was there, stretching out before us. There was good air to breathe and birds singing (and that dog next door was barking again) and the sun came out (even if we wanted it to rain) and we didn't know (regardless of our plans) what the day would bring.

Yet the day was there and someone was running things for all this to exist. And folks were working together so the day just might go as we expected it.

Do you suppose that God really had something to do with it? Maybe it wouldn't be such a bad idea to look to all who are a part of our lives — workers, family, folks on the street, God — and (I'm sure God wouldn't mind being hailed so familiarly), just say to each, "Hey, friend, thank you!"

Death ruled a suicide

Paul Francis Gendelman, 30, was found dead Wednesday, Nov. 16, in his Pebble Beach residence. Jeffrey Jennings, also of Pebble Beach, found Gendelman's body at 6 p.m., according to sheriff's deputies. A note dated Nov. 13 was found by deputies indicating Gendelman intended to commit suicide. The coroner's office ruled the death was a suicide caused by an overdose of drugs.

Services were conducted Sunday at the Weil Funeral Home in Cincinnati, Ohio. Gendelman is survived by his mother, Betty Gendelman, of Cincinnati; and two brothers, Dr. Barry Gendelman, of Carmel, and Arthur Gendelman, of Cincinnati.

Blanche Powell dead at 76

Blanche M. S. Powell, 76, of Carmel died Wednesday, Nov. 16, at the Ave Maria Convalescent Hospital after a period of failing health.

Born in 1900 in Boston, Mass., Mrs. Powell had been a Peninsula resident since 1940.

She is survived by a son, William D. Powell, of Carmel Valley; two daughters, Betty P. Barbour, of Stockton, and Rosemary P. Robnett, of Danville; 11 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Catholic services were conducted at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Burial for Mrs. Sawyer

Marian S. Sawyer, 85, of Carmel, died last Thursday at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital after an extended illness.

Mrs. Sawyer was born in Aspen, Colo., in 1892. She worked as a secretary for 44 years before retiring in 1953.

She is survived by her husband, Charles G. Sawyer, of Carmel; a daughter, Joan Sechi, of Monterey; and three grandchildren, Tobia Buckley, Melissa Jenkins and Guglielmo Sechi, all of the Peninsula.

Catholic graveside services were offered Monday at San Carlos Cemetery. The family suggests contributions to the Monterey County Cancer Society.

William Wesley

William John Wesley, resident of Pebble Beach for five years, died Saturday morning at Community Hospital after a period of failing health.

Born in Taunton, Mass., in 1904, Wesley was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Sunset Ridge Country Club in Northbrook, Illinois, and North Shore Curling Club of Glenview, Illinois.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Vera R. Wesley; his son, Roger W. Wesley, of Lake Geneva, Wis.; brothers Alex Wesley, of Orlando, Fla., and Fred W. Wesley of Mt. Prospect, Ill.; sisters Mrs. Emma Montague, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Mrs. Edna Wer of Tyler, Tex.

The Rev. Charles Ander conducted memorial services Tuesday at the Little Chapel by the Sea.

The family requests donations to the American Cancer Research Society, the Diabetes Association or the donor's favorite charity.

ADVERTISE IN THE PINE CONE

Interview with Whitaker

about Pt. Lobos, one of the toughest, was during the war in '42. The military wanted to set up a target on the headland of Pt. Lobos because they said it was the only place along the Pacific Coast where they could fire from water at land with water in the background. And we really put on a campaign to beat that. We beat the military in wartime. That was a real, tremendous accomplishment. When I was here, I was very active with Fred Farr in helping to keep Highway 1 off the freeway plan. And I've been active and helped so far in keeping Highway 82 into Aspen from being four lanes. So the battle's the same everywhere. Really, the automobile has just ruined this country, anywhere you go.

The thing I thought we should do was to get every property owner in the city of Carmel to dedicate their right to the street in front of their property to the city and then we could put up a toll gate. But it's impossible to get unanimity in this town. We researched it. The city attorney gave a ruling that if you could get every property owner, 100 per cent, to agree, you could close the streets to the public and put up a toll gate.

Q: Francis, since you've moved to Aspen, you've become the subject of a book by Leon Uris. How did you happen to meet him?

W: I did quite a bit of work on his residence and we appreciated each other as independent characters. When he started writing a book on Ireland, Trinity is the name, he came to the forge and pumped my brains, borrowed my books and photographed my tools. This was in Aspen. A character named Conner Larkin is the hero of Trinity. I am Conner Larkin.

'You acquire the quality of the metal you work with'

Q: That was a bestselling book for many weeks.

W: Leon has a tremendous mind for researching, and when he writes about a subject, he knows what he writes about, and I was very flattered that he came by and that I could give so much information on the fine points of blacksmithing. After the book came out, he asked me if he'd done all right.

Q: There was a gate in the book that was blown up, that started the war in Ireland. Was this an actual gate you built?

W: No, I don't think so. I think he just came to me for background materials on how a blacksmith worked, and what tools he uses, and why he's such a stubborn character.

Q: Why is he such a stubborn character?

W: 'Cause he works with stubborn materials all his life, and you acquire the quality of the material you're working with. Fifty years ago, there were seven full-time working blacksmiths on the Monterey Peninsula. When I left in '63, I was the last one.

One of the reasons I left Carmel — we had a tradition and an initiative ordinance that the sand dunes below Ocean Avenue would be left undisturbed. And some developer wanted to lower the sand dunes in front of his property so that he could have a view to the south. And I fought it on the council and I was one against four on the council. I'll never understand why they behaved as they did, because I don't like to think of the obvious reason. I went to court and got an injunction — while I was on the city council — against the city council. And the damn slickers waited until the temporary injunction expired and then they went right back and bulldozed the sand. So that was one of the main reasons why I left here.

I doubt if you'd ever get a combination on the city council again that would do that. I'm certain they wouldn't do it now, but that was a heartbreaker.

Q: Who was serving at that time?

W: Frank Putnam, Edmund Whittlesey, I don't know whether it was Herb Blanks or not. But I know Frank and Ed were on the council.

Q: Besides saving Pt. Lobos from the military, were you involved in making it a state park?

W: Yes. That goes way back. I think that if everybody in the town is really interested, they should go down and walk the beach, or walk through the pine forest and realize what we have here; they'd be even more interested. People who are here now need to go back and look at a life-style that can never exist again. It isn't just being an old timer, or counting how many times you've visited here — it's remembering Carmel when the streets weren't paved, trees in the middle of the street, remembering how hard some handful of people worked to preserve the things they take for granted.

When I first came here there was a bathhouse and a dance hall at the foot of Ocean Avenue. For a few people, for the people that were here, it was very nice. It would be unthinkable now. And there have been all kinds of proposals: to put tennis courts on the dunes, concessions down there, and all the rest of it. If you want to get a message to people now, it would be to try to look back and see what a few people did to preserve what they now have. And if some of us, and mostly Senator Farr, hadn't worked like dogs on the legislature, there'd be a four-lane freeway down the coast, all the way. It was on the master plan. Originally, the state highway was to come right down Junipero Avenue.

Q: There would have been a four-lane freeway down Junipero Avenue?

W: There would have been a four-lane highway down Junipero. Actually, Junipero was more laid out and surveyed for a railroad that was to come down as far south as the Carmel River, a long, long time ago, about the turn of the century when railroads were being built. It has the grade for it. And I think it was probably some people that are long gone and that aren't remembered much now, like Coram Jackson, Devendorf and Newberry, who fought against this highway coming down. And that's why it's at the top of the hill instead of coming down Junipero Avenue. So there's so much background to the people who were here in the early days. Bret Harte, Jack London, the James family, a lot of people, way before my time, who had the same feeling and accomplished things that people here aren't even aware of, like keeping the state highway off Junipero.

Q: Did you ever meet Jack London?

W: No. Jack London was gone. George Sterling, I think, had either just left or died. Lincoln Steffens and Ella Winter were here. John Steinbeck.

Q: Did John Steinbeck ever live in Carmel?

W: No, he never lived in Carmel, but we were very close friends. My wife doesn't like me to tell it, but I think I got drunk with him more times than anybody else. And this was before he was famous.

Q: Would he come to Carmel, or did you go over there?

W: A little of both. We lived up in the woods. We used to make our own wine. The place where I worked here had a Spanish gardener who really knew how to make good wine. And we were one of the most popular couples in Carmel with our homemade wine. He knew the grapes to pick and he had access to the presses, and he knew what plants to use, and what wine to put in for the color, and I always spiked it with a little bit of sugar. So we probably got a 15 to 18 per cent wine down in our cellar. We were scared all the time because of the deed restriction about possessing or making or selling alcoholic beverages. We had a lock on the basement that we could only lock from inside the house. Nobody ever caught us.

The most appropriate quotation about Carmel is related in a wonderful book by Steve Crouch called Steinbeck Country. He says, "I've come back to where I used to grow up, and I don't recognize it. If the people came back who were here when I was here, they'd probably be thrown out of town." That was a delightful one. That book of Steve's is a marvelous book. I sit down about once a month and go through it.

It's an era that can never be relived. But it might be when we run out of gasoline. I lived and worked here two or three years without an automobile. I walked a mile to work and a mile back. I had a knapsack and carried groceries and there were a lot of little old ladies that did the same thing.

We used to go down to the beach and have a bonfire and go swimming nude and have beach parties down there. We would walk out to Pt. Lobos then, from here. Many of the people here then didn't have any money to speak of. We made our own entertainment. We were a pretty close group. But when your numbers get too big, you inevitably lose that. It's just like a big corporation, it doesn't make any difference whether it's government operated, or privately operated. They all become so efficient people lose the personal touch. This is why I've always stayed pretty much a one-man business because I enjoy the personal relationship with customers, taking their ideas in ironwork and translating it into what I consider good workmanship, good technique and just following it through. I could have made a million dollars in the big city stamping things out. But I don't enjoy that. And I think you find that, except in certain parts of the business district, most people don't like stamping things out. They like to do things individually.

'I'm glad you have the time to sit with an oldtimer'

Q: Carmel was a haven for individuals at one time.

W: It's still pretty much true, or it was true up 'til the time I left — you could be just as individual as you wanted. People agreed with you or disagreed with you, but there were never any hard feelings about it. It's healthy. It's real freedom of expression and freedom of opinion. Not just an academic phrase. You could go fight with somebody at a town meeting and go get drunk with them in a bar afterwards.

I'd like to ask you one question. What's the bulldozer doing down on the beach pushing all the kelp back into the water?

Q: They don't like the smell, I guess.

W: It all washes back again with the next high tide. I know, because I've been down on the beach. And I'd like to make one suggestion. I don't have time to go by and see (City Administrator) Jack Collins, but in a lot of places on the downtown sidewalk, I think particularly on Dolores near the post office, the nice generous squares for the trees, but the sidewalk is so narrow, the people walk right on the dirt. There are a number of grills that could go in there that would prevent the soil from being compacted. I know how important it is to keep the soil loose. If you can't keep it loose, the water won't go into it, the water will hit the compacted soil and run off into the street. You can get a very simple grating, that will sit on the dirt, but it won't compact the dirt, and the water will go in. The trees are so important here.

Q: This is going to be an open letter to Carmel?

W: I think you have to be reminded occasionally, you can't overemphasize this, how much so many people over the years have done for this place. They're all forgotten now. I imagine if you went down the street and asked a hundred people if they knew who Perry Newberry was, or Herbert Harren, or John Capman, they'd be a total blank. So this is why I say, they should know what all these people have done to preserve the quality of this town.

Q: The tradition of sitting with an older, more experienced person, and just absorbing — the apprenticeship system — is how life should go on.

W: I'm glad you have time to sit with an old timer. So often that doesn't happen anymore. The personal relationship, the family relationship and the respect for knowledge, it's almost lost. My son Steve, a professor of chemical engineering at UC Davis, tells me the same thing. I've been trying for 10 years to find a worthy successor. I've been disillusioned so completely, I'm just going back to working by myself and doing the national lectures and demonstrations. Steve says, "Pop, they all want instant learning. They'd like to get it with a shot in the arm or a pill." But he said they are unwilling to work to train their minds and minds don't just grow trained. They have to be trained. I don't care what it is, but some discipline. And this is what I find is so lacking.

I was born in a suburb of Boston and I lived in the East, got what little education I have in the East, and then I started in Philadelphia with a very fine ornamental worker, Samuel Yellin, and I worked there for a year. Then I went to Germany for three years and worked with a very fine ornamental worker there. I worked two years for nothing to get my training, which is something nobody wants to do now. The apprenticeship system is almost a lost art.

They want to be instant and they want to start at the top and get all of the benefits and all the paid holidays and everything else. Nobody wants to start and work up from the bottom.

Q: But you think that's a valid way — to start at the bottom?

W: Yes. I liken my craft or profession to a musician, and even the best musicians still practice every day. This is what I find the present generation doesn't want to do, they don't want to practice their scales. They want to make a masterpiece in the first few months.

Q: Have you found anyone to apprentice under you?

W: No. I've been trying for 10 years and I think this is the basic problem. They want to start at the top, they don't want to practice their skills, and they want to make masterpieces in the first year. In this profession, it takes you 20 years. It's something you cannot learn overnight.

Q: But you've lectured all over the U.S. on this subject.

W: I've just gotten into that in the past year. I've been to one national blacksmith's convention a year ago. I was the head demonstrator there. I was the first American to be a head demonstrator. And then we had so many requests from people at the convention, "Oh, please come by if you're in our part of the country." So my wife and I put together a six-week tour last spring, eight states, it took us six weeks and we put on 14 workshops, all sorts of different places, from a little one-man forge to a big place in Ohio, where we had 150 in attendance. So every place I went the reception was the same.

Q: It seems a sad comment on American youth, though, that out of all that, no one was willing to dedicate themselves to learn the trade.

W: You speak of dedication. I don't think most people know what it means or even how to spell it. And that's what it takes.

I have a simple test for people. So far, very few people have understood it. You may not know what a forge weld is, that a blacksmith does. You get the pieces to a molten temperature, take the pieces out and put 'em together. Hit 'em with a hammer and they stick, they fuse together. Well, quite often in the process when you're holding the hammer, a spark will lodge between your hammer handle and your flesh. And it's hot. And it burns. And I ask a young man, if that happens, what would you do. Finish the weld or would you drop the hammer and take the spark out of your hand? And that's a real test. You have to make the weld right away or you lose it. You can't put it back in the fire again, because you can't heat two pieces together the way you heated them separately. I just ask people that. Most of them don't even know what I'm talking about. The real dedicated blacksmith will go on and finish the weld and then he'll take the spark out of his hand. There may be a nice hole burned there. I've got the remains of a couple right now.

WE HAVE SPECIAL PEOPLE LOOKING FOR SPECIAL PROPERTY

A great young couple from Santa Barbara have their hearts set on finding a large historical Victorian. Zoning is important because they are full of ideas to remodel and develop a charming inn for guests.

We have a doctor from the San Francisco area very eager to relocate on the Peninsula. He's looking for just the right home for a growing family -- four bedrooms in the $135,000 price range.

And we are on the lookout for a choice homesite in Carmel, Carmel Highlands, or Pebble Beach priced up to $50,000.

Also have serious buyers for a Carmel or Pebble Beach home for approximately $175,000; a home in Carmel Highlands in the $130,000-$140,000 range; plus a condominium under $100,000.

REAL ESTATE

FROM CARMEL VALLEY TO CARMEL BAY

UP AND DOWN CARMEL VALLEY

Four very different Valley homes

If you've done much exploring in the Valley, then you know it's full of surprises. Small ranches, woodsy cabins, spacious estates, hilltop aeries. Just now we have four interesting properties which illustrate the infinite variety available in the fascinating Carmel Valley.

Close In

at 674 Carmel Valley Road

Only three miles east of Highway 1, a little lane opens on the right, leading you in to "Casa Canada," a four-bedroom, two-bath Spanish hacienda that feels like Arizona. It's all adobe; exterior walls -- inside and out -- are 15"x6" adobe bricks, and the same material makes the fireplace. Four hitching rings embedded in the protective adobe wall remind you that this was once the center of the original Rancho Canada. When he designed this house on its one-acre site in mid-1969, Paul Davis carefully preserved the old Spanish tradition. It's U-shaped, built around a 24 x 26 patio; flat-roofed; tile floored and sunlit through many windows and skylights. There are two bedrooms and a bath in each wing, and the great living room with its flame-colored carpet crosses the front. There's 1,770 square feet, remarkably integrated with the great outdoors. $142,500.

A Little Farther Out

at 25395 Telerana Way at 113

Straight across the road from Mid-Valley is the entrance to Tierra Grande, a favored area. At the moment, only two houses are available in this whole lofty section, and one is this impressive one-acre site. Keep driving almost to the top of Tierra Grande. Almost two miles up, you'll see a natural bowl at your left. Telerana Way winds gracefully down to the several fine homes built here in the last few years. No. 25395 is a long house, stucco exterior with dark-stained exposed framing, containing three bedrooms, two baths, kitchen, dining and family rooms, and a sunken 16 x 22 living room. These branch right and left from a long corridor, and at one end is the large, finished garage, which readily doubles as a playroom. A fenced yard is also great for children. 2,000 square feet, it's $119,500.

at 113 Calle de la Ventana

Just past the Village you turn right and wind you way up toward Robles del Rio Lodge. Not far from there is this surprising house, which looks small from the road, then unfolds into 1,800 square feet of dramatic living space. Two bedrooms and two baths make up the second floor (at street level), and from one you look down into a magnificent 24 x 17 paneled living room. Its east wall is almost all glass, and from that and the deck beyond you have a breathtaking view of the Village and the mountains on the other side. The house is on one-half acre, naturally landscaped, easy to care for. Kitchen and dining room also face the view, and there's a 22 x 13 family room and third bath. It's $115,000.

And Not Far Away

at 96 Quien Sabe

Just around the bend, with the same memorable views, is this three-bedroom, one-and-one-half-bath retreat located on two-thirds of an acre. It's all wood, with pine-paneled interior and open-beamed ceilings in every room. The great fireplace is built of Carmel stone, and so is the protected patio. If you could move the typical "Carmel cottage" to the Valley, this is it. $93,500.
